FEEDING MILKING COWS

VALUABLE LESSONS THAT EXPERIMENTS HAVE TAUGHT US.

Prof. Robertson Writes a Letter to Canadian Farmers Setting Out Some Practical Knowledge that Every Farmer Should Have at His Finger Ends.

There are few matters of greater interest to the man who keeps cattle which I think it important for him to know, than the most economical way of feeding cattle. Instead of presenting a long elaborate explanation of the underlying principles of cattle feeding, I will try and concentrate your attention on a few of the main points of feeding dairy stock in stables. Most men who feed cattle take no pains to have any practical knowledge on the subject at their fingers' ends. I hardly ever meet a farmer who has given as much thoughtful attention to the feeding of his stock as he has to the shape of the mould board of his plow. I do not know any part of farm practice which has been followed with so much haphazard blindness as the feeding of cattle.

Food is any substance which nourishes the tissues of the body and at the same time furnishes energy to perform the functions of living. A horse wears off parts of his muscles by working. He expends energy by pulling loads, and we must have something to supply the waste which comes from efforts and movements. A cow does not require so much energy for labor, but she requires nourishment for the maintenance of her body, and substances for the formation of the product which she yields. So in feeding cows you have to feed materials not merely to supply the place of waste tissue, but to form a product having the same constituent elements in itself as the feed which is consumed. The body of a cow creates nothing. Nobody creates anything. We may change the appearance of things—we may alter the arrangement of things—we never create. We may expand only what we have before acquired. Now then, in feeding cattle economically a man has to use the kinds of food which are adequate to furnish energy—force—like the fuel in the furnace for the boiler of an engine. Some foods have in them a sufficiency of energy to keep the animal living, but the energy is difficult to get at—to get out by the animal. Another way of putting it: If you analyse a stick of cordwood quite green, you find there as much substance and more than in the same stick of cordwood quite dry, and I think the green stick of cordwood would give you more energy through a steam engine than the dry one, but it would take more favorable conditions to get it to burn or in other words to get the energy out for definite use. You get a special service from the silo, in that sense. If you can make the food palatable, you quicken all the energies of digestion. I went to a hotel last year in British Columbia, where the waiters were all Chinamen, and the table cloth seemed to have been sprinkled with coffee and soaked in gravy. All the appointments were in the same condition. The meat, I think, was wholesome, the potatoes seemed to be about as dry as usual and the bread was all right, yet I could stand only one meal and a half. My digestive organs refused to act after that. I think chemistry could have found more there than one could see. Do not forget in preparing food for cattle to make it of a flavor such as they will like. Talking of corn stalks, if you allow them to wilt for half a day after cutting you will have a delicious aroma. You get that in corn by wilting and in hay by the curing process. I have not time to speak of the real value of ensilage beyond this: We have made a very careful calculation of the cost of the corn ensilage in our silo and we find it to be about $1.40 a ton, after making allowance for the waste.

Every animal seems to have a constitutional limit for consuming food with economy and profit. Some animals have a capacity for using a great deal more than others, and of giving a better return for it. In some cases where I have fed beyond 7 lb. of grain per day per cow, the quantity and quality of the milk have been decreased and depreciated, respectively. When that result follows liberal feeding, we have gone beyond the capacity of that animal for economical digestion; when we go beyond that, it means both a waste of feed and injury to the animal. I find a great many men feeding animals more rich food than they can use to advantage. Now, rich food has a very small proportion of water in itself, and an animal must have a great deal of water in its system to use rich food to advantage. Under suitable conditions an animal will not drink enough water to enable it to use more than 6 or 7 lb. of grain per day to advantage, if it is fed plenty of dry fodder besides. Water performs a double service in the feeding of animals—it is a solvent to dissolve the food, and it is a vehicle to carry the dissolved food around the system. Now, every milking cow requires a large quantity of water, and you can give it to her best in the form of succulent food. If you have a cow with a large capacity and are giving her a large supply of grain food, make sure that you give her succulent food with it.

In our feeding experiments with milking cows, definite conclusions cannot be given yet, for the simple reason that the experiments will have to be continued longer and repeated in some parts, to establish any principle or reliable and instructive conclusions.

In the case of three cows, we commenced on a ratio as follows: Corn ensilage, 30 lb.; hay, 15 lb.; bran, 2 lb.; chopped peas, 2 lb.; oil cake, 2 lb.; cotton seed meal, 2 lb.; total, 53 lb. Of that mixture, the cows consumed an average of 68 pounds each per day. The cost was 23.19 cents per day.

At the end of one month the quantities of ensilage and hay were increased, until the ration stood: Corn ensilage, 40 lb.; bran 2 lb.; chopped peas, 2 lb.; oil cake, 2 lb.; cotton seed meal, 2 lb.; total, 68 lb. Of that mixture, the animals consumed an average of 53 pounds per day. The daily cost was 16.53 cents per head. In this class, as between the first and second periods of feeding, the cost per day was reduced nearly 7 cents per head, and there was no appreciable falling off in the yield of milk. There was the natural lessening of quantity, which in the course of a month was equal to 1 pound 6 ounces of milk per cow per day.

With another set of three cows of smaller size, the cost per day was reduced by increasing the proportion of bulky food in the ration. For the first month the ration stood: Corn ensilage, 60 lb.; bran, 2 lb.; chopped peas, 2 lb.; oil cake, 2 lb.; cotton seed meal, 2 lb.; total, 68 lb. Of this mixture, the cows consumed per day 74.5 pounds each. The value of the feed per day was 15.57 cents.

During the feeding period of the second month, an additional quantity of corn ensilage was added to the rations, after which it stood as follows: Corn ensilage, 90 lb.; bran, 2 lb.; chopped peas, 2 lb.; oil cake, 2 lb.; cotton seed meal, 2 lb.; total, 98 lb. Of this mixture the cows consumed an average of 70.8 pounds each per day. The value of the same was 11.75 cents per day per cow.

In every one of the cases, when the ration of six different sets of cows was reduced in cost by the addition of bulky feed with the meal, we found that the animals consumed a less weight per day of the cheaper ration; and in no case was there any appreciable difference in the yield of milk that could be reckoned as due to that cause. The indication of the test is that the ordinary cows of from 900 to 1,200 pounds, cannot consume to advantage more than from 7 to 8 pounds of meal mixture per day, together with corn ensilage or hay or roots.

In every case the teaching of the experiment is in this direction—that by reducing the quantity of the expensive and concentrated feed down to 7 or 8 pounds of meal per day, we obtained as much milk per head, the animals were in as good health, and the cost of feeding was very much lessened. When a large quantity of expensive feed is given (exceeding the quantities I have mentioned of from 6 to 8 pounds per day for the ordinary cow), it will result in no more milk and no increase of live weight.—Prof. Robertson, Ottawa.

A Consideration.

GENTLEMEN,—My brother suffered from summer complaint and was extremely weak. We tried many remedies but without effect. At last my aunt advised us to try Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and before he had taken one bottle he was cured. We consider it saved his life. MISS ADELAIDE CRITTENDEN, Baldwin, Ont.

A young man named O'Hara, brother of Mrs. F. Smith, Trenton, and for a long time a resident of that place, was killed in a railway accident in Minnesota. The body will be brought home for interment.

To get relief from indigestion, biliousness, constipation or torpid liver without disturbing the stomach or purging the bowels, take a few doses of Carter's Little Liver Pills; they will please you.

About six months ago John Nally, living in Greenbrier, several miles north of Bordstown, Ky., married a second wife. His eldest daughter and the new mother did not agree. The trouble ended on Saturday morning when the girl took a double-barrelled shotgun and blew her stepmother's head off.

Old and young, rich and poor, all who have used it have cause to bless Salvator Magnus for the wonderful cures it has affected in consumption, bronchial troubles, scrofula and nervous prostration. For sale at all drug stores in the city.

Three Things to Remember.

Hood's Sarsaparilla has the most merit.
Hood's Sarsaparilla has won unequalled success.
Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes the greatest cures.
Is it not the medicine for you?

Constipation is caused by loss of the peristalic action of the bowels. Hood's Pills restore this action and invigorate the liver.

A Very Fat Girl.

SHARBOT LAKE, Sept. 5.—The division court holds a sitting here on Friday, Judge Wilkison to preside. The docket will be light but interesting. George Estes has an auction sale on Sept. 22nd. Death has entered D. K. Seese's household and taken his only child, aged fourteen months.

Mr. Shibley is kept busy holding magistrate's courts; three last week and one is already set down for Saturday next. The spectators at the court, held by Mr. Shibley, were highly entertained by a row between a prominent citizen and a city lawyer.

We have in our township a girl eleven years old who promises to be equal to any fat woman in the shows. She measures thirty-two inches around the waist, twelve inches around the arm and weighs 113 lbs. Arthur McCoy, two miles west of Clarendon Station has bills out for an auction sale on the 15th. McMahon's circus was here last week and gave a grand exhibition. The fakirs did a thriving business. A councillor, not of Oso, lost $20. People should take papers.

The Great Star "Salvator Magnus" Is Not a Planet

But it is a new and powerful remedy for consumption and all diseases of the lungs and we defy the world to point to anything else in the form of medicine or medical treatment that can show such a record or such a list of marvellous cures, even in the far advanced stages, as Salvator Magnus. For sale at all drug stores in the city.

Back-ache.

Back-ache is caused by sick kidneys. Dodd's Kidney Pills will remove it. By their peculiar action on the kidneys, they impart activity and benefit the system, by purifying the blood. You cannot have pure blood with disordered kidneys; health's existence depends upon their natural condition; they are the governors of the system, continual disorder results in kidney consumption, which is Bright's disease.
