EDITORIAL NOTES

The citizens of Durham are contemplating the holding of an old boys' and girls' reunion. Go to it, Durham, and make it as great a success as were those in Flesherton and Dundalk.

* * *

With the Labor holiday on Monday next and Thanksgiving Day on October 8th, we are all reminded that summer playdays will soon be over. Let us, then, enjoy these periods of recreation to the full while we may.

* * *

The Royal Commission into the Hydro system and the management thereof by the late Ontario government and its representatives have completed evidence-taking, and in a short time may be expected to announce their findings.

* * *

The contractors are pushing ahead with the narrow pavement on the highway from Dundalk northward. But the road will never be satisfactory till the pavement is doubled in width. It is a mistake to make a half-an'-half job of it, and it is not without danger.

* * *

Several papers recently have made the remark that in the recent Labatt kidnapping case the police were outwitted which does not strengthen the reputation of the police in the minds of the people. If the police had have had the co-operation of the family the result might have been different. It is hard to blame the family as they wished to have the victim home safe and sound, but blame should not be attached to the police for their failure.

* * *

It is intimated that Toronto streets are to be interlined with English walnut and Chinese hazelnut trees, replacing the familiar elms and maples that have hitherto had a monopoly as shade trees. Ontario nut growers have been urging on the civic authorities that there will be profit as well as beauty in increasing the variety. Our municipal solons might do worse than follow suit. In Holland, France, Germany, atnd many other European continental countries, farmers and fruit growers on many of the highways have added to their incomes by the free planting of fruit trees. The scenic beauty of the thoroughfares is thus greatly enhanced.

DIABETES

The part played by heredity and overweight in the occurrence of diabetes has been recognized for many years. In more recent years, through the combined use of insulin, diet and exercise, the life of the diabetic has been raised to a normal level. With this wonderful advance in treatment has come the pressing necessity of discovering diabetes early in order that cases may be placed under proper treatment before complications develop.

Most of our readers are familiar with the importance of discovering tuberculosis early, and how unsuspected cases are looked for in the families of the known cases. It is becoming much the same with diabetes. Not every fat person develops diabetes nor do all the members of the family develop the disease when one of them is a diabetic. Nevertheless obesity and heredity are the two outstanding factors in the histories of those who become diabetics.

The physician of today looks for unsuspected cases of diabetes among the members of the family of the known cases. His attention is directed in particular to those who are overweight, more especially to the women past fifty and whose weight is above the average. He does this because it is the most practical way to discover unsuspected cases in their early stages. Examination of the urine for sugar is now such an accepted part of all medical examinations that it has been said that "the only place you can go without an urinalysis is to church."

Diabetes is much more common in cities and towns than it is in rural areas. It may be that this is because city people do not have as much hard physical work to do as have those on the farm. The result is that city people put on fat which is, as we have said, the worst enemy of the diabetic. The increased prevalence of diabetes in women over forty, as compared with men of the same age, may have some relationship to the introduction of labor-saving devices into the home.

In so far as the prevention of diabetes is concerned, those with a diabetic history should not marry into a family with the same history. The children of such a union are seriously handicapped as regards diabetes. Overweight should be avoided at and after middle life by all. Those who have a family history of diabetes should avoid an increase in their girth, and they should be examined periodically by their physician to allow for early detection if the disease should develop.

Chaperone your cigarettes. They shouldn't go out alone—Warning on a National Forest highway.

The black lines up the centre of the pavement really serve as life lines in crowded traffic and should never be crossed unless there is a clear road ahead.

While piling rails the other day Mr. Reg. Emary, Gravel Road, killed an ordinary garter snake some 3 feet long and was also confronted with a family of 65 little snakes about 4 inches long and a number about an inch in length. Mr. Emary figures there were about 75 in the household altogether, which he also destroyed.—Meaford Express.

HOLDFAST U. F. W. O.

Seventeen members and fifty visitors attended the regular meeting of the Holdfast U.F.W.O. Club on the beautiful lawn at the home of Mrs. D. Macphail on August 8th. The meeting opened by singing the Club song, after which the creed was repeated in unison.

After the business was transacted the Schramm orchestra favored with 2 well rendered numbers on violins and guitar. Little Dorothy McDonald delighted all present with her highland dancing, while her father played the pipes. Miss Agnes Macphail gave a very interesting address, in the course of which she told of the strike in Hanover and gave a very vivid description of the Seigniary Club at Lucerne, Quebec, where she had attended a convention of Zonta Clubs recently. She also spoke of conditions prevailing in Canada and suggested some remedies. Mrs. J. K. McLeod gave a short reading, after which Mr. McDonald and Dorothy favored with more music and dancing, as also did the Schramm orchestra.

The club will meet on September 12, at the home of Mrs. Edgar Patterson. Visitors always welcome.

A Frenchman is going to extract gasoline from sea water. That ought to be ideal fuel for sea fleas.

Care and restraint on the part of motor drivers and pleasure seekers would minimize the list of accidents and fatalities during the coming week end.
