HOW HAPPY I'LL BE.

A little one perched among the flowers,
In the blush and bloom of summer hours
She twined the buds in a garland fair
And bound them up in her shining hair.
"Ah me," said she, "How happy I'll be
When my years more have given me
And I am a maiden, with youth's bright glow
Flushing my cheeks and lighting my brow!"

A maiden stood in a pleasant room,
Where the air was filled with soft perfume.
Vases were near, of antique mould,
Beautiful flowers rare and old,
And she, of all the loveliness there,
Was by far the loveliest and most fair.
"Ah me!" sighed she, "how happy I'll be
When my heart's true love comes home to me,
Light of my life, my spirit's pride,
I count the days till then reach my side."

A mother bent over a cradle cot,
Where she pillored her babe to his smiling rest.
"Sleep well," she murmured soft and low,
And she pressed her kisses on his brow,
"Oh child, sweet child! how happy I'll be
If the good God let thee stay with me
Till later on, in life's evening hour,
Thy strength shall be my strength and power."

An aged one sat by the glowing hearth,
Almost ready to leave the earth,
Feeble and frail, the race she has run
Had bore her along to the setting sun.
"Ah me!" sighed she, in an undertone,
"How happy I'll be when life is done!
When the world falls out with its weary strife,
And I soar away to a better life."

'Tis thus we journey from youth to age,
Longing to turn to another page,
Striving to hasten the years away,
Lighting our hearts with the future ray;
Hoping in vain till the visions fade,
Wishing and wanting, through sun and shade,
Turning, when earth's last sun is risen,
To the beautiful rest that remains in Heaven.

BARBAROUS COURTSHIP.

The Way They Make Love in Wild Countries—Exceeding Brutality of Some Lovers.

In Africa are found many curious courting customs. In Sierra Leone the negroes had a house devoted to the instruction of their daughters, who remain there a year under the care of an old man. At the end of this time they are dressed in their best and assembled before the marriageable young men, dance, and the latter take their pick. On the West coast, when a girl is of marriageable age, she is led about the village by her friends in order to advertise the fact, her arms and hands adorned with gold trinkets to allure the young men. She is sold into matrimony, the highest price being $20, with rum and tobacco. In Congo, when a girl is marriageable, she is put in a tent for a month and suitors come and make her presents. Then she takes her pick. They live together for two or three years to see if they are suited to each other. In New Zealand and the Feejee islands courtship is done by capture. When a man sees a woman he likes he

TELLS HER TO FOLLOW HIM.

If she refuses he knocks her down and carries her off. The method of courtship is equally brutal. The young lover's mode of paying his addresses is efficacious and simple. With a blow of his nulla-nulla, or war club, he stuns the object of his affections, and drags her insensible body away to some secluded spot, carrying her home as soon as she recovers her senses. "Sometimes two join in an expedition for the same purpose," says a writer, "and then for several days they watch the movements of their intended victims, using the utmost skill in concealing their presence. When they have obtained the knowledge they require they wait for a dark, windy night; then, quite naked and carrying single their long jog spears,' they crawl until they reach the camp-fires in front of which the girls are sleeping. Slowly and silently they creep close enough to distinguish the figures of one of their enemies; then one of the intruders stretches out his spear and inserts its barbed points among her thick, flowing locks; turning the spear slowly around, some of her hair speedily becomes entangled with it; then, with a sudden jerk, she is aroused from her sleep, and as her eyes open she feels the sharp point of an other weapon against her throat. She makes a virtue of necessity, and follows her captor."

STEALTHILY THROUGH THE BUSH

At St. Petersburg it was long a custom to hold a fair on Whitsunday of the women who wanted husbands. The women carried in their hands silver spoons, to show their possessions. Their parents and friends went with them to arrange terms. The young men strolled about, and when they saw a girl they liked they spoke to her guardian and stated their prospects. In Bosnia, near the Danube, young girls of the Mouammedan faith were permitted to walk about with their faces uncovered, and if a man inclined to matrimony fell in love with one of them as he passed along, he threw an embroidered handkerchief or some other article on her head or neck. She then retired to her home and appeared no more in public.

To Heaven in a Pullman Car.

"And his [Eleazer's] sword clave to his hand," was the Rev. Mr. Talmage's text at the Brooklyn Tabernacle on Sunday. He contrasted the Hebrew general's energy in fighting the Philistines with the easy-going ways of those modern Christians who want a "rose-water and kid-glove" campaign. "They want to ride to Heaven in a Pullman sleeping car," said he, "with their feet on plush cushions. They want the bed made up early so that they can sleep all the way, and have the black porter, Death, only wake them up in time to roll into the Golden City. They want soft sermons, in morocco covers, laid down before them on velvet cushions. But that is not the way to salvation. We must expel from the church those who eat the communion bread on Sunday and eat the widows' houses all the week. Not a baptism of cologne and rose-water, but one of fire, is needed."

Rainsford's Church.

St. George's Church, Stuyvesant Square, New York, which has been undergoing extensive improvements, was re-opened on Sunday with the Rev. W. S. Rainsford in the pulpit. Mr. Rainsford preached on the second coming of Christ, and said: "I do not admit that it is unlawful for a man to wish to die, but it is unnatural. It is a sullish impulse that tempts men to flee from the ills they have and fly to others that they know not of. It is directly designed by the performers of the deeds imposed on them by their Creator."

CONSUMPTION.—A cause well known in connection with the Hair Renewer, which restores gray hair to its natural color by a few weeks use. Sold at 50 cents a bottle by all druggists.

"SUMMER COLDS."—At the commencement of a cold take a teaspoonful of Perry Davis' Pain-Killer in a tumbler of hot milk and sugar, and the cure is more sudden than the cold.

KISSING HIS WIFE.

A Remarkable and Laughable Scene in a Russian Court—A Husband Full of Love.

(Moscow News.)

There have been many cases in which kisses have been considered in courts of justice, and not only considered but valued in money and paid for. But we have never heard until now that husbands could be sentenced to pay for kissing their wives. The district court of this city, by a recent decision, now warns all husbands that it is not always safe for them to kiss even their own lawful wives. On Aug. 6th the case of "Kochergin agt. Kochergin" was tried in the district court. Catherine Kochergin sued her husband, Ivan Kochergin, for 1,000 roubles, due on two bills of exchange given by him to her. The plaintiff, a young and pretty woman, and well dressed, appeared in person.

"Ivan Kochergin!" cried the court.

In answer to the call the defendant appeared. He was a merchant of middle age, with the manners characteristic of his class.

HE WAS IN A JOLLY STATE.

"Here we are," he said, coming up before the bench; and turning to his wife added, sweetly smiling, "Catherine Stepanovna, why should we quarrel?"

"You are in a court," said the presiding judge severely. "This is not the place for personal explanations."

Mrs. Kochergin then presented two bills of exchange to the court.

"Is this your signature on these bills?" the defendant asked.

"Yes, it is mine," was the answer, "there is no use of denying that. But I am not going to pay them, for they are worthless and not valid. I will tell you how I came to give them. Catherine Stepanovna, my wife, several times left my house and went to her father, Mr. Shestoff. But I love her so fondly that I could not stay long without her, so I went to see her.

"DO YOU WANT YOUR WIFE?"

asked Shestoff; "if so, sign this bill." And I did sign it; I signed two of them. I gave the bills, not in exchange for money, but on account of my love for kisses from my wife. Oh, how I am fond of her! If your honor orders me to pay these bills it will be highway robbery," roared the defendant.

"Behave yourself," admonished the court.

"Ah, my dear soul, I understand."

"I am not your soul at all," roared the court, "and I will punish you if you do not come to your senses."

But the defendant would not listen to the court. He turned his smiling face to his wife, flung her kisses with his hand, and said:

"Catherine Stepanovna! how dearly I love you!"

AFFECTING THE COURT.

Roars of laughter shook the court room. For a moment even the judges could not control their features. The plaintiff blushed, and the defendant continued ardently to profess his love for his wife. When order had been restored the court announced the verdict. The defendant was ordered to pay one thousand roubles to his wife, and in case he did not pay his house was to be attached.

"It is a downright robbery!" shouted the defendant.

The court ordered Mr. Kochergin to leave the court room at once. Meanwhile Mrs. Kochergin started out with her father, but the defendant rushed after her crying: "Catherine Stepanovna! Kate! My darling! I love you!"

The auditors rushed after them, laughing, stamping and applauding. The pretty plaintiff took a droshki and hurried away, and poor Ivan Kochergin ran after her with his arms outstretched and shouting:

"Oh, Kate, how I love you!"

A Curious Letter.

Mrs. Brady has just produced a prayer book sent to her by the late James Carey, with the following letter, which she received out of Kilmainham from Carey two days before he sailed for Dartmouth for the Cape:

To Mr. and Mrs. Brady: No one regrets poor Joe more than I do. His and untimely fate would have been carried out without me. The week before I said one word, in the chapel before mass, Kelly, Joseph and I were together. Kelly said, "Marwood will have a terrible job on me, the weight of my body will never break my neck. You are all right, Joe." So you see they know what they had to suffer. Every one here except Joseph Brady told all they knew. The wretches who were sent to Mountjoy told us all before we were arrested. God will have mercy on Joe's soul. I send you the book he held in his hand on the fatal day with the prayers. When a prisoner I had the book. Joe got it and wrote in it also the names of the wretches who told all before I said one word. * * * Every one told all on poor Joe and on James Carey. Wishing that God may give you strength to bear your great affliction is the earnest wish of James Carey. Keep this private.

On the cover of the prayer book is the following: "Cell No. 26.—James Carey, T. C. conspired to Murder. Arrested 13th January 1883. 24th of February. In on remand yet. This is in the handwriting of the informer; and in James Brady's handwriting follow these words. "Is an informer of the darkest dye."

Then, in Carey's handwriting, this follows: "After every one believed him, he saved himself and many others." In the inside of the back cover is written in Carey's handwriting: "Savanagh, the park carman, is also an informer." On this cover there are also in Carey's writing the words: "This is the prayer book Joseph Brady held in his hand on the scaffold.—James Carey."—Pall Mall Gazette.

ASHANTEE REBELLION.

London, Sept. 27.—Fighting was renewed at Coomassie on the 19th instant between Koffee Kalkalli and the ex-King Mensah. If the present Ashantee revolution succeeds their threat into execution there is likely to be another raid on the Gold Coast Colony. There are two parties seeking to restore Koffee Kalkalli, the King whom Lord Wolseley deposed. A messenger has already arrived at Cape Coast from Koffee Kalkalli saying that his opponents threaten to take away the "golden stool" of Ashantee and bring it into the Gold Coast Colony rather than let him have possession of it. If this is done the ex-King says the whole of Ashantee will come after it into British territory. The golden stool is in reality the Throne of Ashantee.

FATHER OF FISH-CULTURE.

Seth Green's Ideas About the Finny Tribe and Some of His Varied Experiences.

(Chat, Field and Farm.)

"How did you ever come to devise this scheme?"

"I have been working at it ever since I was large enough to hold a pin."

The above remark was addressed to Mr. Seth Green, the veteran fish culturist, who is known to the entire world, and his reply indicates the extent of his labors.

"When I was quite young," he continued, "I would lie on the limbs of trees that reached out over the water entire afternoons watching the movements of the fish and studying their habits. In this way I discovered many characteristics which were before unknown. I saw, as every observer must see, the destructive elements that are warring against fish, and realized that unless something were done the life in the streams of this country would become extinct. To counteract this disastrous end became my life work and I am happy to say I have seen its accomplishment?"

"Were you successful on the start?"

"No, indeed. Up to that time all artificial attempts to hatch and raise fish from the spawn had failed, and I was compelled to experiment in an entirely new manner. The work was a careful and tedious one, but I finally succeeded, and to-day I am able to hatch and raise fully seventy-five per cent. of all spawn."

"Enormous! Why, that is a larger percentage than either the vegetable or animal kingdoms produce in a natural condition."

"I know it, but we exercise the greatest care in the start, and guard the little fellows until they become able to care for themselves."

The foregoing conversation took place at Caledonia, where the representative of this paper was paying a visit to the state fish hatcheries. It has been his privilege to report very many interesting sights within the past twenty-five years, but the view presented here exceeds in interest anything ever before attempted.

"How many fish are there in these ponds, Mr. Green?"

"As we have never attempted to count them it will be impossible to say. They extend way up into the millions though. We shipped over three millions out of the ponds this year and there seemed to be as many afterward as before. We have nearly every variety of the trout family and many hybrids."

"You speak of hybrids, Mr. Green. What do you mean by that?"

"I have experimented for years in crossing the breed of the various fish and am still working upon it. We cross the female salmon with the male brook trout, and thus produce a hybrid. Then we cross the hybrid with the brook trout, which gives us three-quarter brook trout and one-quarter salmon trout. This makes one of the finest fishes in the world. He has all the habits of the brook trout, lives in both streams and lakes, develops vermilion spots on his sides, rises readily to a fly, is far more vigorous and fully one-third larger than ordinary brook trout of the same age. The possibilities of development in the fish world are great and we are rapidly ascertaining what they are."

As the man of news watched the countenance of Mr. Green while he was giving the above account, he could not but feel that he was in the presence of one of the few investigators who, from a rich and life-long experience, bring great benefits to the world. Let the reader imagine a strong and stalwart frame, surmounted by a head strongly resembling that of Socrates, and covered with a white silky beard and luxuriant gray hair. Seth Green, the father of fish culture, in a picture of health, and the reporter could not help remarking so.

"If you had seen me the last winter and spring, young man, you might have thought differently," said the veteran.

"How is that? One would think, to look at you, that sickness was something of which you knew nothing."

"And so it was until last winter. I went down into Florida in the fall to see what kind of fish they had in that state and study their habits and was attacked with malaria in the severest form, and when I came home I realized for the first time in my life that I was sick. My symptoms were terrible. I had dull, aching pains in my head, limbs and around my back. My appetite was wholly gone, and I felt a lack of energy such as I had often heard described, but had never experienced. Anyone who has ever had a severe attack of malaria can appreciate my condition. I went to bed and remained there all the spring, and if there ever was a sick man I was the one."

"It seems hardly possible. How did you come to recover so completely?"

"My brother, who had been afflicted by a severe kidney trouble and threatened with Bright's disease was completely cured by a remedy in which I had great confidence. I therefore tried the same remedy for my malaria and am happy to say I am a well man to-day and through the instrumentality of Warner's Safe Cure, which I believe to be the most valuable of medicines. Indeed, I see it is endorsed by the United States Medical College of New York, and that Dr. Gunn, Dean of that institution, has written a long article concerning its value."

"And are you now as well as formerly?"

"Apparently so. I keep the remedy on hand all the while though and do not hesitate to recommend it to others."

"One question more. How many pounds of fish have you here and how are they divided?"

"Well, we have 43 pounds, which are divided up as follows: 22 pounds of brook trout, 2 pounds of salmon trout, 4 of McChind river or rainbow trout, 2 pounds of German trout, 2 of California mountain trout, 2 pounds of hybrids, 4 of one-quarter salmon and three-quarters brook trout, 2 pounds of gold fish, and 1 pound of Carp. Then we have what we call the centennial pond or happy family, consisting of crosses of different fish, including Kennebec salmon, Land Locked salmon, Californian salmon, brook trout, salmon trout and hybrids. These fish range in size from minnows to 18 pounders, and in age from one-and-one-half months to 11 years. I forgot to say, also, that we have a thousand pond, which is entirely empty, which speaks pretty well for a community of many millions. Indeed the whole secret of fish culture can be summed up in four things. Impregnation—using no water. Plenty of food. Plenty of pure water and cleanliness."

The numerous fish exhibitions which are taking place in all parts of Europe and the natural interest which is being manifested in this subject throughout the world all owe their origin to the process above described as originated and conducted by Seth Green. It is certainly cause for congratulation to every American that this country produces so noble a man whose genius brings value to the world, and it is proof positive of the greatest merit that a remedy even with such high standing as Warner's Safe Cure is known to have should be so strongly endorsed and recommended by one so reputable and reliable as Seth Green.

A CHURCH SCENE.

How Over an Organ—One Man Attempts to Throw It Into the Street—A Vote Taken.

Belleville, Sept. 28.—The Presbyterians of Shannonville having erected a handsome new church, dedicated in January last, resolved to purchase an organ. The acting pastor is a student of Queen's College, Mr. Young, who has considerable musical talent. Having secured the consent of the congregation the organ was purchased and two weeks ago placed in the church. On the Sunday when the instrument was first to be used Mr. David Brown, who conscientiously objects to instrumental music in the church, proceeded to the entire prior to the hour for service and dragged the obnoxious "kat o' whistles" to the door with the intention of throwing it into the street. As he got it near the door, however, two ladies confronted him, closed the doors and holding them screamed for assistance. This was almost immediately given them. Mr. Brown was compelled to abandon his intention, and the organ was placed in the front part of the church. The service proceeded as usual, the congregation dispersing at the close. Mr. Brown remained in his seat. Mrs. Brown, after unknowingly to persuade him to come out, drove home. Two hours later two members of the congregation entered the church and compelled him to retire. Yesterday a meeting of the Session was convened to consider the matter. Rev. M. W. McLean presided. On a vote the members were not to use for the organ, and the general members of the congregation twenty to one the same way, the only dissentient being Mr. Brown's son. Mr. Brown himself did not vote. Mr. Brown held that according to the practice of the church a member cannot introduce an organ without obtaining the consent of the officials of the congregation. Mr. Brown says there was no official consultation and the question will have to be determined by the Presbytery.

It means that among the Chinese, the Lavers of insects are used medicinally to give strength to feeble; Caterpillar Syrup they consider a specific for Bronchitis; Dead Toads are taken to give tone to the system, while the horns of the rhinoceros, the bones of tigers, the jaws of tigers, and the wings of bats all have a place in the Chinese Pharmacopoeia. A simple remedy containing well known ingredients is nothing thought of by a patient, and their doctors seem to be quite of the same mind. How different it is with us outside barbarism in this respect, where the elegant preparation, of pleasant taste, composed of well-known and well-tried remedies, such as embodied in Robinson's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Lacto-Phosphate of Lime is not only sought after by the patient but is recommended and largely prescribed by the most intelligent physicians.

IMPORTANT TO STEAM USERS AND ENGINEERS

How to Keep Boilers Clean.

FORBES PATENT AUTOMATIC BOILER CLEANER, when properly applied to a steam boiler, solves both the problems of

Muddy Deposits and Scale

from water before they become baked into scale. The Cleaner is automatic and requires no attention, and will overcome a bad water in a boiler here, change a bad water in fact and reverse, as well as a reasonable liability to explosions.

Showing the agency for this section of the country, we are prepared to fit them up and guarantee them to be all the patentee claims for them.
