HIS SOMBRE RIVALS.

Author of "Barriers Burned Away"—"Opening a Chestnut Burr"—Etc., Etc.

"Suppose I punish the irony of your astonishing words," Graham replied. "By saying that I know just enough about the game to be aware how much skill is required to play with such a veteran as your father."

"If you did you would punish papa also, who is innocent."

"That cannot be thought of, although in truth, I play but an indifferent game. If you will make amends by teaching me I will try to perpetrate as few blunders as possible."

"Indeed, sir, you forget. You are to make amends for keeping me talking here, forgetful of filial duty, by giving me a chance to teach you. You are to be led meekly in as a trophy by which I am to propitiate my stern parent, who has military ideas of promptness and obedience."

"What if he should place me under arrest?"

"Then Mrs. Mayburn and I will become your jailers, and we will keep you here until you are one of the most accomplished whist-players in the land."

"If you will promise to stand guard over me some of the time I will submit to any conditions."

"You are already making one condition, and may think of a dozen more. It will be better to parole you with the understanding that you are to put in an appearance at the hour of whist;" and with similar light talk they went down the walk under the apple-boughs, whence in Graham's fancy the fair girl had her origin. As they passed under the shadow he saw the dusky outline of a rustic seat leaning against the bole of the tree, and he wondered if he should ever induce his present guide through the darkened paths to come there some moonlight evening, and listen to the fancies which her unexpected appearance had occasioned. The possibility of such an event in contrast with its far greater improbability caused him to sigh, and then he smiled broadly at himself in the darkness.

When they had passed a clump of evergreens, a lighted cottage presented itself, and Miss St. John sprang lightly up the steps, pushed open the hall door, and cried through the open entrance to a cosey apartment, "No occasion for hostilities, papa. I have made a capture that gives the promise of whist not only this evening but also for several more to come."

As Graham and Mrs. Mayburn entered, a tall, white-haired man lifted his foot from off a cushion, and rose with some little difficulty, but having gained his feet, his bearing was erect and soldier-like, and his courtesy perfect, although toward Mrs. Mayburn it was tinged with the gallantry of a former generation. Some brief explanations followed, and then Major St. John turned upon Graham, the dark eyes which his daughter had inherited, and which seemed all the more brilliant in contrast with his frosty eyebrows, and said genially, "It is very kind of you to be willing to aid in beguiling an old man's leisure." Turning to his daughter he added a little querulously, "There must be a storm brewing, Grace," and he drew in his breath as if in pain.

"Does your wound trouble you to-night, papa?" she asked gently.

"Yes, just as it always does before a storm."

"It is perfectly clear without," she resumed. "Perhaps the room has become a little cold. The evenings are still damp and chilly;" and she threw two or three billets of wood on the open fire, kindling a blaze that sprang cheerily up the chimney.

The room seemed to be a combination of parlor and library, and it satisfied Graham's ideal of a living apartment. Easy-chairs of various patterns stood here and there and looked as if constructed by the very genius of comfort. A secretary in the corner near a window was open, suggesting about friends and the pleasure of writing to them amid such agreeable surroundings. Again Graham quoted, prompted by the peculiar influences that had gained the mastery on this tranquil but eventful evening, "Will Miss St. John credit there pouring words straight from her heart to me?"

He was brought back to prose and reality by the major. Mrs. Mayburn had been confiding with him, and he now turned and said, "I hope, my dear sir, that you may never carry around in a barometer as I am afflicted with. Rain with an infirmity grows a little capricious, if not worse."

"You have much consolation, sir, in remembering how you came by your infirmity," Graham replied. "Men bearing such proofs of service to their country are not plentiful in our money-getting land."

His daughter's laugh sang out musically as she cried, "That was meant to be a fine stroke of diplomacy. Papa, you will now have to pardon a score of blunders."

"I have as yet no proof that any will be made," the major remarked, and in fact Graham had underrated his acquaintance with the game. He was quite equal to his aunt in predictions, and with Miss St. John for his partner he was on his mettle. He found her skilled indeed, quick, penetrating, and possessed of an excellent memory. They held their own so well that the major's spirits rose heavily. He forgot his wound in the complete absorption of his favourite recreation.

An opportunity occurred Graham could not keep his eyes from wandering here and there about the apartment that had so taken his fancy, especially at the large and well-filled bookcases and some pictures, which, if not very expensive, had evidently been the choice of a well-cultured taste.

They were brought to a consciousness of the flight of time by a clock chiming out the hour of eleven, and the old soldier with a sigh of regret saw Mrs. Mayburn rise. Miss St. John touched a silver bell, and a moment later the same surgeon who had wondered her father's appearance early in the evening entered with a tray bearing a decanter of wine, glasses, and some water-like cakes.

"Have I earned the indulgence of a glance at your books?" Graham asked.

"Yes indeed," Miss St. John replied, "your martyr-like celebration shall be further rewarded by permission to look over any of them which is in town. I doubt, however, if you will find them pedantic enough for your taste."

"I can take all your fences from your lofty asking if you think one can relish nothing but intellectual meat. Beef can enjoying one of your delicate cakes. You must have an excellent cook."

"Papa says he has, in the line of cake and pastry; but then he is partial."

"What did you make them?"

"Why ask?"

"O, I'm not objecting. Bid my tongue speak, I'd empty the plate. I was under the impression that young ladies were not adepts in this way, though."

"You have been abroad so long if you may have an entire library of impressions. Of course, retired army officers are naturally in a condition to support high culinary talent, but then we must keep up the idea of equilibrium of parts."

"Could you be so very kind as to direct your hackney coachman to make one of your evening questions an office possible?"

"The relevancy of that request is striking. Was it suggested by the flavour of the cakes? I sometimes forget to make them."

"Their flavour would not prevent my taste from being gratified if you will permit me to come. Here is a marked volume of Emerson's works. May I take it for a day or two?"

She blushed slightly, hesitated perceptibly, and then said, "Yes."

"Alfred," broke in his aunt, "you students have the name of being great owls, but for an old woman of my regular habits it's getting late."

"My daughter informs me," the major remarked to Graham in parting, "that we may be able to induce you to take a hand with us quite often. If you should ever become as old and crippled as I am you will know how to appreciate such kindness."

"Indeed, sir, Miss St. John must testify that I asked to share your game as a privilege. I can scarcely remember to have passed so pleasant an evening."

"Mrs. Mayburn, do try to keep him in this amiable frame of mind," cried the girl.

"I think I shall need your aid," said that lady, with a smile. "Come, Alfred, it is next to impossible to get you away."

"Papa's unfortunate barometer will prove correct, I fear," said Miss St. John, following them out on the piazza, for a thin scud was already veiling the stars, and there was an ominous moan of the wind.

"To-morrow will be a stormy day," remarked Mrs. Mayburn, who prided herself on her weather wisdom.

"I'm sorry," Miss St. John continued, "for it will spoil our fairy world of blossoms, and I am still more sorry for papa's sake."

"Should the day prove a long, dismal, rainy one," Graham ventured, "may I not come over and help entertain your father?"

"Yes," said the girl, earnestly. "It cannot seem strange to you that time should often hang heavily on his hands, and I am grateful to anyone who helps me to enliven his hours."

Before Graham repassed under the apple-tree boughs he had fully decided to win at least Miss St. John's gratitude.

Important.

The Excelsior Rupture. Treatment was introduced to the American people several years ago by furnishing the remedy to those afflicted with Hernia in any of its forms and collecting no pay until permanent cure was effected. In this way the treatment gained a world wide reputation on its own merits, never failing to cure any reducible Hernia. The Company has placed the remedy on sale by all druggists in the United States, Canada and England, in this way bringing it within the reach of all classes at a trifling cost. Ask your druggist for a free book or send six cents for one to the Excelsior Rupture Cure Manufacturing Co., Ogdensburg, N.Y.

Wait a Minute

And read this. You may be troubled with corns, and if not at present they may take root in the near future. Therefore we want to tell you what to use in order to make a perfect cure, and especially what to avoid. Of course like the majority of people you will want to use the best that is to be had. That is Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. Sure, safe, painless. Avoid, then, the articles "just as good" or the something else "a good deal better." You will regret using anything else than Putnam's, for it don't hurt, and you can't tell what the others will do until you try. Don't live to be sorry when you can so easily prevent it. Polson & Co., props.

Science.

To increase the weight of the body, invigorate the system, revitalize the exhausted and depressed, is the true object of medical science. The digestive organs must be in a healthy condition if we wish to secure this desirable result, and no remedy yet discovered has proved so effectual in accomplishing this as Fellows' Hypophosphites. It contains the Hypophosphites to build up the nervous system and all the fat producing properties of Fellows' and to enrich the blood and supply the animal economy with the elements for reconstruction. For sale at Wade's and the Pharmacy, W. J. Wilson.

Honest and True.

This is eminently the case with Polson's Nervoline, the "great pain cure." It is an honest remedy, for it contains the most powerful, the purest, and most certain pain subduing remedies known to medical science. It is honest, for it does all it claims to do. It is honest, because it is the best in the world. It only costs 10 or 25 cents to try it, and you can buy a bottle at Polson's and King's drug stores. Nervoline cures toothache, neuralgia, pain in the back and side. All pains are promptly relieved by Polson's Nervoline.

Nervoline is one of the most elegant combinations ever offered to the public for the relief of pain. Pleasant to take, powerful in effect, sure in results, and cheap because the strongest, purest, and most certain pain remedy in the world. You can test this great remedy by going to Polson's and King's drug stores and buying a 10 cent sample bottle. Try it at once.

Cures Free.

Any reader troubled with dyspepsia, costiveness, headache, liver complaint, etc., should call at Chown's Drug Store, and secure a free trial bottle of McGregor's Speedy Cure at once, which will convince you of the merits of the medicine. It cures permanently where all other medicines have failed. As a blood purifier it has no equal. Remember it costs nothing to try it. Regular size, 50 cents and $1.

Civil Service Examinations.

The Civil Service Examinations for this district opened in Belleville yesterday. Among the candidates are J. McGuire, Kingston, and E. F. Vankoughnet, Napanee. The Excise promotion examinations will commence on Monday next. Among the candidates are Messrs. E. Fahey, A. Howie, A. Hanley, F. M. Keough and J. O'Donnell, Kingston.

A Failure in Crops.

A species of worm is eating all the leaves from the chestnut and hickory nut trees in many sections, and the crop will be a failure. Worms that afflict children or adults will prove a failure if Dr. Low's Pleasant Worm Syrup is used. It is a safe and sure cure for all worms that lurk in the human system, tape worm included.

Testimonial.

Toronto, Dec. 20th.

I have much pleasure in recommending the Galvanic Belts to any one troubled with cold feet, and believe they will prevent a great many complaints which this changeable climate causes.

Major J. W. Selby.

W. J. Wilson, the Pharmacy, agent for Kingston.

They all tell the same story. Mr. W. Thompson, Junction, Dublin, suffered for years from Dyspepsia, got no relief until he used Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. He says it was just the medicine he needed. It has cured him.

CHAPTER I.

"I was taken sick a year ago
With bilious fever."

"My doctor pronounced me cured, but I got sick again, with terrible pains in my back and sides, and I got so bad I
Could not move!
I shrunk!
From 208 lbs. to 120! I had been doctoring for my liver, but it did me no good. I did not expect to live more than 3 months. I began to use Hop Bitters. Directly my appetite returned, my pains left me, my entire system seemed renewed as if by magic, and after using several bottles I am as sound as a sovereign but weigh more than I did before. To Hop Bitters I owe my life."

Dublin, June 6, '81. R. FITZPATRICK.

CHAPTER II.

Malden, Mass., Feb. 1, 1881. Gentlemen:—I suffered with attacks of sick headache, Neuralgia, female trouble, for years in the most terrible and excruciating manner. No medicine or doctor could give me relief or cure until I used Hop Bitters.

"The first bottle
Nearly cured me;
The second made me as well and strong as when a child.
"And I have been so to this day."

My husband was an invalid for twenty years with a serious
"Kidney, liver and urinary complaint,
"Pronounced by Boston's best physicians
"Incurable."

Seven bottles of your bitters cured him and I know of the "Lives of eight persons"
In my neighborhood that have been saved by your bitters.

And many more are using them with great benefit.

"They almost
Do miracles."—Mrs. E. D. Slack.
