Letters To The Editor

Dear Mr. Editor—:

During the past few days we have been hearing quite a lot about girls wearing shorts. We understand that there was even some mention made of the subject at a recent public meeting. I have seen the much criticised shorts about town, and really, Mr. Editor, I fail to see anything so very "disgraceful" about them.

It seems strange to me how it is that some folk appear to judge the character of a man or a woman by the clothing he or she wears. How characters must change. In the winter when they are wrapped up in thick warm dresses they are in no danger of eternal darkness, but in the summer when they resort to lighter clothing, it is assumed that they have suddenly become very "wild" and "brazen" and all that.

I am certain, Mr. Editor that a good suit of shorts on an athletic girl looks fine. To my mind it is not so much the shorts that are objectionable as it is the way in which folk regard them. There is no shame in good healthy limbs. There can be a deal of shame in thought.

It is a strange thing that it is quite O.K. to lie on a sunlit beach in an abbreviated bathing suit, but to walk up a street adjacent to that beach in a suit of shorts much heavier and more concealing than the aforesaid bathing suit is all wrong. It is more amusing than perplexing.

Yours for healthy shorts
"Shorty"

Dear Sir:

We think it time there was something being done about the government control of liquor and beer parlors. Personally I am not afflicted by either, but would some sane minded person please explain the meaning of these words, "Am I My Brothers' Keeper," found in Gen. 4 : 9.

Our temperance speaker said a few Sundays ago, "turn a wild beast loose and then try to control it", so with the liquor, put it where people can have all they want and then try to control it. We have heard of men getting drunk since the beer parlor was opened in Markdale, that we had not heard of being drunk for years We used to say, "Save the boys, oh! save the boys, save them from the curse of rum," what about some of the girls? We may now say also. "save the girls, oh! save them from the curse of rum". Now we would like to know what some think along these lines. We might say more. We think temperance people should patronize temperance towns.

"Temperance"
