How did Stratford become a world class arts centre?

Find out at Cultural Symposium

The keynote speaker for the January 20/21st Halton Hills Cultural Symposium (HHCS) is David Prosser, Director of Communications at the Stratford Shakespeare Festival.

As an accomplished international speaker, Prosser will inspire participants to dream big about Halton Hills' future by describing the long and challenging transformation of Stratford from coal train hub to world class arts centre. He will describe how individual community leaders can join together around a common vision and make dreams come true.

In addition to Prosser, the agenda includes:

- Lots of time to meet, catch up and share experiences with others working or volunteering within Halton Hills arts, culture and heritage.
- An exciting demo of the My Halton Hills community website we are building and how it will benefit your group/business

- A chance to shape our community's future by giving your input into the Halton Hills Sustainability Project

A behind-the-scenes tour of all that the new Acton Library has to offer, and

- Three use-it-now learning sessions on how to engage, energize and keep intergenerational volunteers; how to understand and use the Celtic Wheel of Leadership to maximize the effectiveness of project groups, boards and teams, and how to write successful grant applications.

You can register online at www.haltonhills.ca/theatre or call Beatrice at 416-575-1232.

Registration for the Friday evening/Saturday event is $35 for the first individual and $25 for a second, so consider bringing a friend so they can get inspired too. Youth under 18 are free.
