NEW STARLING SCARING STUNT

Ornithologists at Belleville the other day were quite excited till they learned the black and yellow birds they had seen around were only a farmer's idea of scaring starlings away. As a matter of fact the queer birds are starlings themselves. The farmer caught them in a trap and painted the lower half of their gleaming black bodies a brilliant yellow. Other starlings just can't stand the sight of them, and the pariah starlings are flying miserably about, shunned by their comrades. The yellow-black starlings are even causing their more conservatively dressed brethren to seek other climates where such radicalism among starlings is unknown. That was the farmer's idea.

Some people are so heavenly minded that they are of no earthly use.
