EDITORIAL NOTES

We have just been informed by the Cunard-White Star Shipping Company that the new giant liner, Queen Mary, will leave Southampton on May 27th next for her maiden trip across the Atlantic. The vessel, which has been constructed on the Clyde at Glasgow, is scheduled to arrive in New York on June 1st and will be on show for five days, when she will leave to complete her first round trip. British hopes are high that the Queen Mary will capture the blue ribbon of the Atlantic, held for a long period by ships owned on the continent. As for us, when we cross the ocean we hope to be in no particular hurry to end the journey, unless the waves rolled high. What's all the hurry to "get there," on land or sea, which seems to possess the race? Folk should take time to live by the way.

Premier Baldwin of Great Britain in the hour of his triumph, gives a noteworthy example of his trustfulness in his associates who stood by him, although they fell in the recent electoral fight. He had retained in his Cabinet the Macdonalds, father and son, and will arrange to find them seats in the House of Commons. By and bye it is expected that the ex-Premier will be given further promotion—perhaps to a seat in the House of Lords. He and his old associates in the Labor party are not likely to again "make up," and as for the junior Macdonald, he is doubtless thankful that, as "the son of his father" he has received unusually rapid promotion—to the chagrin probably of more deserving members of the dominant party. He will have a good chance to prove his mettle while holding his new office of Secretary for the Dominions, until lately held by Mr. "Jimmie" Thomas.

Mrs. George Black, new member of the Canadian House of Commons, announces that she is Independent, as she wanted to be free to support any measure in the interests of her constituency without party affiliation. That is the course usually taken by candidates in constituencies of the Yukon type. We recollect in this connection an experience of the late Sir Wilfred Laurier. Down on the St. Lawrence an ardent admirer of Sir Wilfred got a big majority, but found that the silver tongued chieftain had been beaten in the country. The first day of the session the new M.P. was seen seated on the government side and was promptly jeered at by those who noted his career in the campaign. Not a bit abashed, however, he arose and addressed Sir Wilfred, "I do not wish to be misunderstood. I told the right honorable gentleman that if he won I would support him. He was defeated, and he is there (pointing to the Opposition benches) and I am here (with the government) and here I must remain. My constituents demand I must go with the government." The loaves and fishes had to be looked after, at all hazards!

—Surgeons at Christie Street Hospital, Toronto, were called upon to remove three safety pins from a man's larynx as the result of a peculiar mishap at Camp Borden. By means of a bronchoscope, in three different places, the pins were extracted and the patient was reported as progressing favorably. The victim of the accident, Signaller John D. Clark had been holding the three pins in his mouth while arranging some flags. Some one approaching him from behind slapped him jovially on the back with the result he swallowed the pins.

ONLY YOU AND I

(Huntsville Forester)

How many are left in Canada, to take care of the job of producing after all, who are in some way dependent upon public support, are deducted from the total population? The Cornwall Freeholder may be a bit extreme, but the following computation at least emphasizes the extreme to which we are going in making people dependent upon the exchequer. The Freeholder puts it as follows. Population in Canada, 10,000,000: Eligible for Pension Fund 3,000,000; Number who are prohibited from working under Child Labour Laws 1,500,000; Number who are working for Government Agencies 2,000,000. Number of Provincial and Dominion members with their staff of yes and lobbyists, 1,500,000 Number seeking relief who could work and won't, 1,999,998. Leaving to produce the Nation's goods (You and me and I'm all worn out).

About Barn Fires

Every fall and winter there are barn fires, lots of them, of which a lighted lantern is the cause. Just why a man would hang a kerosene lantern in a mow or in a stable when he is moving hay or other fodder which clouds of dust arise is beyond understanding. In a barn not many miles from Alliston a few weeks ago a lantern was hung below the opening in to the barn above the stable and the owner put down a quantity of hay from which dhst arose putting the light of the lantern in a haze. Suddenly there was a report and a flash of flame through the dust. The hay had become ignited and there was barely time to liberate the stock before the flames reached them. The insurance companies know this dust and lantern hazard and some of them are weary about taking risks on farm properties while others do so at high rates. It is a case of the carelessness of a few making insurance expensive for the many. There is no sure remedy for the hazard as there can be no guarantee that a farmer using an oil lantern will not inadvertently carry it into a cloud of dust. Stables and barns in which Hydro light is installed are immune as the bulbs over the light protect the property from fire and should the bulb be broken the light goes out with the first contact of air. The man who moves hay or straw in any quantity in a barn only by the light of day is safe from the lantern fire hazard. The dust raised when feed is taken from the pile and placed in front of the stock is seldom thick enough to be dangerous, but should dust from this cause commence to accumulate the man causing it would do well to cease feeding till the atmosphere in the stable has become clear.
