EDITORIAL NOTES

Flesherton village council some years ago provided a dumping ground for refuse, the size of which is sufficient for a place of this size. The dump is out of sight of travellers on the highway and was an ideal site for such a purpose. However, some people are too lazy or have not sufficient interest in the appearance of that approach to town and dump their refuse on the roadside or at the side of the lane leading up the hill and an unsightly situation is the result. We hope some of our citizens who persist in such actions will have a change of heart and keep the approaches to our villages as clean as possible.

* * *

How would our village appear to motorists if there was not a shade tree on our streets? It would certainly have a barren appearance, and would not be a fit place for mankind to reside. There are many streets in town which are bare of shade trees and other areas where more could be planted to enhance the beauty of our village in the years to come. A start could be made on the highways entering the village and then the back streets could receive their quota of trees in future years. Our village council would be well advised to take this matter up at once and commence a campaign for a more beautiful town. The expense need not be very great as we are certain there are many citizens who would collectively devote their time and energy to leave a heritage of which future generations would reap the advantage. Let us observe the Coronation of George VI by planting rows of trees on our main streets.

WHY NO MAPLE LEAVES?

(The Haileyburian)

The sight of the new Canadian postage stamps the first of which reached Haileybury at the week end, is rather disappointing in one respect, the maple leaf has been omitted from the design. Why this should be is a question to which there does not appear to be any definite answer. In other respects the stamps are of a very pleasing design, the picture of King George VI is a good one, although he is shown in civilian clothes instead of uniform, and there is no change in the color of the three-cent denomination, the most commonly used one. There can be no complaints other than the one we have just mentioned. For as long as the average Canadian citizen can remember, the maple leaf has been one of the country's emblems and has appeared continuously on the postage stamps. It is not, perhaps, a very important matter, but there is considerable sentiment wrapped up in this emblem and its omission from the new design is rather disappointing. Nothing can be done about it, we suppose, but we hope that when it is necessary to again change the postage stamps the maple leaf will be restored to its former place.

KIMBERLEY

Mr. Henry Ellis, Powassan, died on Sunday, April 25, 1937, at his residence there. Mr. Ellis was a brother of Messrs. William and Albert Ellis of Kimberley; also Miss Selena Ellis of Kimberley. He leaves to mourn his passing three sons and two daughters; his wife and one son predeceased him. The funeral was held on Tuesday.

Mrs. George Proctor, who has been seriously ill at her home, is recovering.

YOU GAIN BY CONQUEST

Most students are inclined to shirk the studies which are hard for them. The average employee is pleased to be assigned easy work, and annoyed if he is shifted to a place where more is expected of him; yet it is the difficult studies that develop brain power, the difficult tasks which produce efficient workers.

The truth can be carried further. An easy, pleasant life is not the most conducive to development of character. Progress and growth in almost any line are the result of meeting difficulties and overcoming them. You gain by conquest.

How Money Circulates

The story is printed of how a woman has been "haunted" by a penny, which has followed her several thousand miles on her travels. A Dusseldorf newspaper says she first noticed the coin in her purse in 1925, because of the peculiar marking on it. She spent it in a shop and was surprised to be given it as part of her change in another shop a few days later. She spent it again, but it was returned to her in a similar way. In fact, this sort of thing happened several times. Then she came to Canada, taking the penny with her. She spent it here, but it was returned to her again three years later—this time in England. Now she has decided to keep the coin as a souvenir. This little story simply illustrates how much merchandise even a small coin will buy, if it is kept in circulation. A year or so ago a Dollar Bill was marked and circulated in Aylmer and in seven days it had passed through at least twenty known hands, thus purchasing at least $20 worth of merchandise. The moral is: it pays to spend your money in your own home town.

Safety In Speed

After May 24th motor cars on Ontario highways may be driven at a speed of 50 miles an hour and the driver will not be breaking the law. The recent amendment to the act increased the limit from 35 to 50.

Reviewing the situation that has existed under the old limit of 35 miles per hour it must be admitted that the act was a "sham;" that it was not enforceable. The majority of drivers paid little or no attention to the law and exceeded the limit which, in view of the improvement in cars, was low. The bad feature of the whole thing was that it made practically every driver a law breaker.

A logical and properly observed speed limit should cut down reckless driving. Fifty miles an hour is fast enough for anyone to drive any place and there should be little excuse for exceeding it. At the same time, traffic officers have definite figures to adhere to and can rightfully argue that the person who claims that fifty miles isn't fast enough, and exceeds it, should be placed in the reckless class.

Speed can be safe at fifty and if the new law is enforced to the letter there is every reason to believe that the changed law will make Ontario highways safer for all concerned.

STYLE IN SALES FACTOR

"Men may pay for them, but I'm pretty sure the wives, daughters and sweethearts are buying the motor cars of 1937," said a Pontiac executive recently. He pointed out that the motor car today is a style article, as is bound to be the case with any article which makes a broad general appeal to the fair sex. "The car of today," he continued, "is virtually a household article, because it is used equally by every adult member of the family. And everyone knows that the women members of a family must be satisfied before any household article is purchased.

An authority informs us that in ancient Egypt and Babylonia, books were not valued so much for the new ideas they contained as for the old, time-worn lore they preserved. The authors is those days were, at least honest about it. Much of so-called originality in current literature is merely rehash.

TOOK PATIENCE TO LAND RIDE TO CITY

Patience is one virtue the hitchhiker must possess if he is to get along in the world. A Toronto lad, returning from spending Easter holidays with relatives at Holland Centre, found himself at the Dundalk highway corner at four o'clock on Monday. Rev. A. H. Ferry of Corbetton gave him a lift to that place. He spent the rest of the evening till 11.30, with his thumb cocked backwards, at the Corbetton corner. He was put up for the night at Lydall Campbell's at Corbetton, and was on the job at 8 o'clock the next morning with his thumb all set again. Not until 11 o'clock, when Rev. Ferry went to Toronto, did the lad get another lift.
