Prep your yard for the winter

Homeowners invest hundreds, sometimes thousands of dollars in converting their backyards into an extended outdoor living space. Yet when the autumn chill blows in, many abandon their man-made oasis only to be faced with an overwhelming clean-up in the spring.

It's easy to make light work out of a fall clean-up with the right tools, say gardening enthusiasts. The Ryobi ONE+ 18-volt battery system, which features over 50 products such as a cordless hedge trimmer and cordless blower, will save time when pruning and prepping your yard for the winter. The advanced lithium interchangeable batteries give you superior runtime and rapid recharging, eliminating the frustration of running out of power mid-clean up.

To protect your outdoor space from harsh, destructive winter elements, take a look at these tips from Ryobi:

- Trim plants and shrubs for optimal spring blooms and to avoid spring "bald spots";
- Remove leaves and dead plant material from annual and perennial garden beds;
- Protect perennials from frost heaving by mulching after the ground freezes;
- Cover shrubs that are sensitive to low winter temperatures with burlap;
- Build a simple (or elaborate) compost bin for fall leaves, add fresh grass clippings and cover until spring;

- Remove dead branches from rose and fruit trees;
- Check eaves troughs, siding, railing and pathways for loose screws, shaky handrails and loose pathways and make repairs to eliminate possible slipping hazards and prolonged property damage.
