EDITORIAL NOTES

The Toronto Star made a peculiar error on Saturday last in its report of the capture of two alleged criminals at Scarboro. The error consisted of publishing a picture of the late Charles Phillips, who was a policeman on the Toronto force for a number of years, but who died years ago. According to the Star Charley is still attached to the Main Street station. The picture used shows Charley to be the same good-natured soul that he was in life. But seriously, the Star should bring its album up-to-date by expunging the dead timber.

OWEN SOUND

After 56 Years

For the past fifty-six years the writer has had the pleasure of conducting the Northern Business College—and on July 1st transfers the responsibilities to Mr. Chas. K. Johnston, the President and Miss Marjorie H. Willson, the new Secretary-Treasurer.

To the old students, and old friends and the public generally, we say thank you ever so much, for your generous patronage.

The choice of my successors has been made with great care—I wished to have the college carried on in the same practical and thorough manner that has characterized it in the past. It is with complete confidence that I hand over the ownership and management to my successors. Their scholastic attainments, splendid record of leadership in commercial education in well known Canadian schools and excellence of character make it a pleasure to transfer the management and makes me happy to see the institution in such good hands.

I bespeak for them a welcome to our community and the splendid support you have given me through the many years I have had the privilege of serving you.
