SHE WAS X-RAYED 12 TIMES

Tried Electric Treatment For Rheumatism

To suffer for five years with pains in the back . . . to be X-rayed 12 times . . . to undergo electric treatment for three years . . . and then to find that Kruschen was what she really needed to get relief—that was this woman's experience:—

"Five years ago, I was taken ill with pains in my back. After three weeks in bed I was sent to hospital. At first, spine trouble was suspected, but after 12 X-rays I was found to have serious lumbar rheumatism. For over three years, I was given electrical treatment three times a week. Last year, I tried Kruschen Salts and it has done wonders. I have discontinued hospital treatment, and last winter, the first for five years, I was free from pain. My friends are amazed to see me so well." (Mrs.) E.P.

In a good many cases, rheumatism cannot resist the action of Kruschen Salts, which dissolve the painful crystals of uric acid—often the cause of those aches and pains—and assist the kidneys to eliminate the poison through the natural channels.

Whole Town Co-operative

Stores, Movies, All Other Businesses Are Run Without Profit

NEW YORK, — The first attempt in the United States to run the business of a whole community without making any profit has been announced.

The town, Greenbelt, Md., model community conceived by Rexford Guy Tugwell, when he was a member of President Roosevelt's "brain trust," will operate as a co-operation.

Stores, movies, beauty shops, garages and all other business places in the community of 900 families will be owned by their customers, under an agreement between the federal government and the Consumer Distribution Corporation.

All the profit realized from the business after operating expenses are deducted will be returned to the people who buy the goods or services.

The experiment was made possible through the philanthropy of Edward A. Filene, wealthy Boston merchant who set up the Consumer Distribution Corporation with a gift of $1,000,000.

I Killed a Man

(From Scribner's Magazine)

In the records of the courts and insurance companies, it was pretty much the same old story. While driving home early one evening, I rounded a familiar curve and faced a pair of glaring headlights. On the right of the road, a millworker was on his way to work on the night shift. He became confused and jumped the wrong way. The impact threw me a little forward in my seat. The millworker's body slid flat on the pavement for perhaps 50 feet, rolled over, jerked, and lay still. The dinner pail he had carried under his arm rattled along the pavement for another 20 feet, then all was quiet. When we got to him, we saw there would be no hurry about taking him to the hospital. He was dead.

During the long court ordeal afterward, it was established beyond all doubt that the accident was unavoidable. I am a free man; free to lie in bed on Sunday mornings, stretching and yawning; free to eat when I am hungry and drink deep when I am thirsty; free to feel the wind and sun on my face, to know the four seasons, to love.

But I cannot forget that because of me a man will never see the white sparks from molten steel again, or smell the hot metal in the molds, or feel the satisfying tug of his muscles against a heavy crane, or peer out of a factory window into a moonlit night, or open his dinner pail with the keen appetite of a laboring man. Because of me a mother will never again hear a familiar footfall when work is done, and she will have things to explain to her babies that will break her heart.

I know all this is not my fault—a court of law has told me so—but I cannot stop thinking how different things would have been if I had started just half a minute sooner or later, or if I had been going just a little slower or faster, or if, in that split second, my skill had been just a little greater or my brakes a little better, or if I had thought in advance of all the possible circumstances that might have been waiting for me around that curve. It has been two years since it happened, yet these thoughts go round and round in my mind continually. Nothing can make me forget that I am still walking this earth, and that because of me another man is not. I cannot forget that a combination of factors—factors that could so easily have been just a little different — happened to work out with lethal precision, and I killed a man.

Millions of Worms Clean Up Everything, Advancing West Into Alberta

YOUNGSTOWN, Alta. — Across drought-scourged farmlands and sun-wilted gardens, millions of caterpillars, in a slow but relentless invasion, moving westward from the Saskatchewan border, kept in a triangular district this week south-east of this town 140 miles east of Calgary.

The "army" worms, moved on from the borderlands, leaving a path of destruction, destroying even Russian thistles, the last hope of farmers in the dried-out district for winter cattle feed. In scores of fields, where an abundance of thistles grew, only the stems remained. The few trees in the area were stripped.

In some gardens, where late rains had revived wilted plants, destruction by the caterpillars was complete, the invaders eating their way through beans, beets, corn and cabbages.

Only one remedy is known to combat the menace—poison bait—but few farmers use it as it endangers horses and livestock.

TORONTO.—Appreciation of the governments of Canada in their protection of colored persons was voiced in a resolution passed this week by the regional conference of the Universal Negro Improvement Association. The resolution volunteered the promise the colored man, "so long as he remains in Canada, shall always be a loyal and obedient citizen." Four hundred delegates, 350 of them from the United States, attended.

Copper Can Be Tempered

One of the Arts, accredited to the ancient Egyptians and thought to have been lost to modern science, is that of tempering copper. Scientists believe that the Egyptian legend is true only to the extent that the ancients hardened this copper by hammering. It is now claimed that by the addition of 2% of a metal called Beryllium to copper, the alloy can be tempered to a hardness that will even cut steel. The vast possibilities that this new alloy offers to modern industry has stimulated the search all over the world for deposits of the mineral Beryl, from which the metal Beryllium is extracted. Geologists agree that Canada offers the best hunting ground and it is expected that large deposits of the mineral will be found in this country.

Alleged WIT

A few well-earned compliments are the spice of life.

Lieutenant (giving examination) — "This exam will be conducted on the honor system. Please take seats three apart in alternate rows.

About the time a fellow gets enough money saved so that he can go places and see things, says Mr Bright, rheumatism sets in.

Read it or not:—The world's oldest living married couple is Rustam Manedov and his wife Sayat, of Armenia. Their ages are 140 and 116.

We've noticed anyway that it's the brain workers who insist that brain work is really harder than physical labor.

Critics declare the gentlemen who write the gags for the radio comedians are "near the end of their rope." In most cases, though, it wasn't their rope in the first place.

We pay for our wrong-doings only so far as we can. They are like debts.

Woman — "Oh, sergeant, it must take wonderful presence of mind to open your parachute after you've fallen so far?"

Aviator—"I find it very monotonous, madam. I used to run an express elevator in a skyscraper."

Wife—"I want you to get a box of face powder for me at the department store before you come home tonight."

Husband — "At the toilet goods counter where the sweet little blond works? The one with the soft eyes and—"

Wife—"No, dear. I'm afraid you're too tired to shop for me after having worked so hard all day. On second thought, I'll not bother you with it."

Miss Petite—"Tell me, Doctor, is skin grafting a very late discovery?"

Doctor—"Oh, no; it's only a branch of a very old art. All grafting is a skin game."

Fiddle to Dummy Won't Play Second

HOLLYWOOD. — Judy Canova, hillbilly singer, this week broke her engagement to ventriloquist Edgar Bergen, blaming dummy Charlie McCarthy for the cooling of a three-year romance.

She said she didn't like "playing second fiddle" to the wooden-headed little fellow that Bergen made into a favorite.

"It's an obsession with Eddie," she added. "He thinks and talks of nothing but Charlie."

Their estrangement came to light when Miss Canova balked at plans for posing with Bergen for a studio photograph.

"Eddie can stuff his old dummy in his trunk and get in with him," she announced.
