This Monday morning, October 25, the ground is covered with snow and all signs are predicting an early winter, with most people's potatoes still in the ground. Some say that the birds are all gone, but Chas. Moore saw a robin in the bush on Friday and on Sunday morning one was feeding on the hawberry tree at his kitchen door, so we are still hoping for more good weather. If this "Indian Summer" is as strong as we hope the "squaw winter" is, we will have quite a spell of good weather yet.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. John Duncan on Tuesday, October 19th, the gift of a daughter.

A large gathering of friends met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Stinson on Friday evening to enjoy a few social hours with them. The time passed quickly with dancing, cards and social chat. At midnight the gathering was called to order and an address was read by George Moore and the following presentations made by Elvin Moore, Jno. Talbot and Ed. Badgerow. Dear Ernie and Helen:

Judging from the number of well-wishing friends and happy faces met together tonight it is quite unnecessary to try to express in words our wishes for your future happiness and prosperity.

A little advice, however, may not come amiss. We would advise you, Ern, to step lively when Helen puts in her requests, for though we never heard of her using it very much, yet she might have a little strap hidden away to better emphasize her requests, for she has been in the habit of being obeyed. Helen, we have heard of your culinary arts, and feel sure that you believe the old adage that "the way to a man's heart is through his stomach" and a well-cooked meal will get you better results than the strap, anyway.

We ask you to accept this lamp, that through the years its bright rays may, as evening falls, help to make your home more bright and cheerful and a constant reminder of your friends; also this end table and cushion. Although these tokens are to make your home life more comfortable we ask you often to stray from that home to visit us in ours or join with us in church and community life.

—Ed. Badgerow, John Talbot and Elvin Moore.
