MEANING OF HANDSHAKE

Nothing so eloquently reveals character as the hand-clasp claims the Picton Times. One may train his voice to express courage and a cordiality unpossessed; one may acquire a poker-face; one may feign pleasure at meeting and displeasure at parting; but the offered hand neither conceals nor deceives. A blind man, deaf and dumb from birth, can read this message of the hand.

Is it a strong hand that functions with the irresistable determination of a vise? If it is it belongs to a he-man—a go-getter—or to a true friend. Its warm and sturdy clasp belongs to a frank countenance and a feeling heart.

Is it a hand that gives a quick, slight pressure and at once liberates itself? That sort belongs to the busy man and is born of indpendence and individualism.

Is it a limp hand? Then it belongs to a limp person, to one who is too tired to be interested in persons and things. Ti him hand shaking is an unnecessary formality in which no energy should be wasted.

Is it a lingering hand that caresses rather than clasps and which refuses to liberate its prey until it has accomplished its purpose. This is the practised hand-clasp of the flirt, the poltician, the swindler and the cheat. It belongs to the person with a "mission" or a "message."

The chap who continuously harps on one subject should admire the musician who knows only one tune, if you can call a chap a musician who knows only one tune.

Cutting Alfalfa for Seed

In parts of Eastern Canada suitable for alfalfa seed production it was formerly the practice to cut the first crop for hay and the second crop for seed. In the best seed producing areas the first crop is now taken for seed which is cut in August. In Western Canada the cutting of the first crop for seed has always been the practice followed.

A decision which is sometimes difficult for the grower to make is in regard to the proper time to harvest the crop for seed. Since alfalfa seed dos not mature evenly due to the prolonged blossoming period, a plant may bear pods varying from ripe, which are dark brown in color, to green and immature. Because the ripe pods shatter easily, there comes a time when more seed is being lost by shattering than is being replaced by the ripening of the green pods. Just before such a time is reached is the proper time for cutting. This will be when about half to two thirds of the pods are brown. Much of the immature seed will mature in the swath.

In seasons when a hay shortage is imminent the grower may be compelled to take the first crop for hay and if the second crop is podding up well it may be cut profitably for seed. The decision as to when to cut this crop should be decided by the average date of the first fall frosts for the locality. If the crop is cut after a severe frost, not only is the germinability of the seed lowered but the sample will contain much discolored seed resulting in a lower commercial grade.

An optimist is a man who doesn't care what happens, if it doesn't happen to him.
