The northern part of the North American continent may now be considered fairly safe against intrusion by foreign powers. President Roosevelt has declared that the United States would not stand idly by were invasion of the Dominion attempted, while Prime Minister Rt. Hon. Wm. L. Mackenzie King in reply adds, "Canada could best play her part as a good neighbor by seeing to it that enemy forces never cross this country by land, sea or air to attack the United States." Such friendliness should be an example to the world.
