Sheridan Nurseries wins international award—for the second time

Canada's largest garden centre retailer and grower, Sheridan Nurseries has received the prestigious accolade of International Grower of the Year by the International Horticultural Producers Association (AIPH) for an unprecedented two years in a row.

Beating off strong competition from renowned international horticultural companies, Sheridan Nurseries has been awarded the AIPH's Golden Rose in the annual International Grower of the Year 2013 competition on Sept. 11.

"To receive this honour for a second time is an absolute testament to the dedication and skills of our entire team at Sheridan," said Karl. E. Stensson, President at Sheridan Nurseries.

"Our Nursery, Marketing, Financial and Purchasing employees all had a part in making this happen. To receive it during our 100th anniversary in business is 'icing on the cake' for an outstanding year," he added.

AIPH Secretary General, Tim Briercliffe said, "This award is given to the best of the best from around the world. The standard of entries goes up all the time and each year the award demonstrates the outstanding professionalism and integrity shown by the world's leading nurseries."

This award comes as Sheridan Nurseries is celebrating its 100th year in business in Canada.

"As one of the few family owned businesses still operating in Canada after 100 years, we believe our success has become intrinsically linked to our standards of excellence and strong brand presence within the sector," said Stensson. "I believe this award is a reflection of our company values and hard work over the last century."

Growing over 1,200 cultivars of perennials and hardy nursery stock on 350 hectares in Halton Hills, Sheridan Nurseries ships 1.8 million plants annually to markets across North Eastern North America.
