It pays to advertise, but advertise where it pays. That is in your local paper.

Mrs. Robt. Smith of Eugenia has been in the Markdale hospital for the past week, but is at present recuperating at the home of her sister, Mrs. R. Bentham.

The junior band intends to give a musical recital for half an hour on Thursday afternoon, commencing at 4 o'clock p.m. on the square, providing the weather is suitable.

Mrs. W. H. Thurston left Saturday to spend the winter with her daughter, Mrs. N. H. Durrant, at Mitchell and was accompanied by Miss Dell Thurston and friend of Toronto.

Flesherton merchants are including Tuesday, December 26th, Boxing Day, as a holiday and will remain closed. The proclamation by Reeve Down appears on another page.

Mrs. Cecil Nelson and little daughter returned home Monday after spending the past two months in Owen Sound, where both underwent hospital treatment. We are pleased to see them home again.

The L. O. B. A. offer their thanks to those who donated articles and fruit for their bale which was sent to Richmond Hill Orphanage. They also wish to thank Mr. F. W. Duncan for packing it.

This has been one of the most open falls in the history of Ontario. As yet, this Tuesday evening, the ground is free of snow and rain has fallen this week. It is hoped that there will be snow for Monday, as what is Christmas without a blanket of white covering the ground.

HOW UNKNOWN SOLDIER WAS CHOSEN FOR ABBEY

The story of how the body of the Empire's Unknown Warrior was selected for burial in Westminster Abbey was given for the first time on Remembrance Day, November 11, in a letter to the London Daily Telegraph by Brigadier-General L. J. Wyatt commander of the Briitsh troops in France in 1920.

Receiving notification that the King had approved a suggestion for burial of the Unknown Warrior in the Abbey, General Wyatt issued instructions "that the body of a British soldiers, which it would be impossible to identify, should be brought from each of the four areas—Aisne, Somme, Arras and Ypres—on the night of November 7." They were to be placed in the chapel of Saint Pol.

The party bringing in each body was to return at once so there should be no chance of their knowing on which the choice fell.

"The four bodies lay on stretchers, each covered by a Union Jack; in front of the altar was the shell of a coffin which had been sent from Britain to receive the remains. I selected one, placed it on the shell; screwed down the lid. The other bodies were removed and reburied in a military cemetary outside my headquarters at Saint Pol.

General Wyatt described the journey of the body homeward, how it went under escort to Boulogne where it was placed in a plain oak coffin with wrought iron bands through which passed a crusader's sword from the Tower of London.

A company of French infantry provided a guard at Boulgone Castle. They were relieved by a guard of United Kingdom and Dominion troops who accompanied the casket home on H. M. S. Verdun.

General Wyatt also disclosed that six barrels of earth from Ypres Salient were put on board to spread in the Abbey tomb in which the body was to be placed.

The story is told of the British sailor who dived into the sea in order to secure an unexploded German mine so it could be taken ashore and examined by experts. He risked his own life but the chances are he saved many others.
