EDITORIAL NOTES

It is not going to be so easy for employable men on relief to evade work in the future. At Ottawa a relief recipient since 1932 was given suspended sentence and six months probation for refusing to work. Provincial Secretary Nixon has called attention to the case of a number of Toronto men who refused to avail themselves of obtaining jobs when offered positions and all along the line there is a tendency to view with less tolerance men on relief who refuse to work. Attention has been directed to a Toronto reliefee who refused to go to Camp Borden at 90 cents an hour because it was not sufficient to provide for his dependents.

There is a growing befief that a closer co-relation between industry and education in Ontario is urgntly needed. It is contended that much of the shortage of skilled labor has been caused by the breakdown of the apprenticeship system in the past decade and by failure of the Ontario education system to equip graduates for immediate usefulness and productivity in industrial life. The Civic Placement Committee of Toronto will recommend to the Hepburn Government widespread changes in Ontario's system of technical education so as to give industry a larger voice in determining the curricula. It is felt that in future students should be given less class-room work, and by co-operation between government and industry, be given an opportunity to gain actual experience in factory or work shops. Alderman D. Fleming, Toronto is of the opinion that technical education should be divided into two parts, first, two or at the most three years of vocational education, instead of four years at at present, and secondly, two years of technical training in the strict sense of the term, accompanied where possible by apprenticeship, with the time divided between class-room and factory or work shop.
