HYSTERIA IS ABSENT

Saturday and Sunday nights the German air force went "all out" in its bombing attacks upon England and reports from London are to the effect that hundreds were killed and that thousands were wounded in the air attack on that city. This is only what was expected from the first of the war and the wonder is that the attacks did not commence prior to this time. Britain is all that lies in front of Hitler's path to world domination and he will do his best to brush aside the opposition and continue with his victories. But he has to compete with an indomitable British spirit that does not know defeat, which will prove superior to Hitler's ruthless warfare as practised in Poland and the other countries that have fallen to his force of arms. Brtain is going steadily amassing armaments and machinery of war, preparatory to that day when she must show that she is mistress of the land and air as well as the sea. The British people are showing a wonderful calmness under the intense bombardment and their determination to see this through will surmount the effects of the havoc wrought by the enemy planes.

HITCH-HIKING SOLDIERS

The problem of soldiers hitch-hiking along the highways on week end leave to their homes has been receiving the attention of the authorities and newspapers during the past couple of weeks. Several fatal accidents have occurred to soldiers using this method to reach their homes and comment has been made that the government and railways should give the men passes over the various lines free of charge to the men, contending that the pay is so low that it doesn't warrant their spending any considerable sum for their passage. The men solved their own problem by hitch-hiking and the car owners entered into the spirit of the game and were glad to assist the soldiers along their way. Many men prefer to travel that way, as it takes them to their destination quicker and with more enjoyment. But the man several hundred miles from his home is at a great disadvantage in regard to transportation, especially on his last leave that makes it a hardship for him to spend his last leave with his family. The private in the ranks cannot afford to pay his own transportation, especially if he is a married man, and it is the general opinion of the public that the government should give more consideration to this problem that it has done in the past.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Have you registered your gun or rifle? Do so at once and save embarrassment later.

With the close of the Toronto Exhibition fall is considered to have arrived and we can look for frosts at any time now. Predictions are that the coming winter will be cold with plenty of snow.

The Provincial Police are busily engaged checking up on holders of national registration certificates and those who fail to produce their little paper, and also those who did not register are finding themselves in court and forced to pay fines for their forgetfulness. The best policy is to carry your certificate with you at all times, and if you did not register attend to it at once.

The formation of a Home Guard unit in any district is to be commended and all able-bodied men are urged to join. While it is hoped that it will never be needed as its counterpart is in England, it will have a tendency to increase the war-conciousnes of the people, which is hard to arouse when there is so little activity amongst the armed ground forces in England.

"What about that notice outside your shop, 'Money returned if not satisfied'?" protested the disgruntled customer.

"Ah," said the shopkeeper, "I am satisfied with your money."

We are constantly hearing that things will never be the same—that the war has changed everything, etc., and we are beginning to believe it, for it seems that according to the Brockville Recorder cows that had gotten used to girls milking them refused to let their milk down when the men returned on the job. Hunting for a reason the farmwife advised the men to doll up a bit, put on some perfume and charm the eye and the olfactory nerve of the bovine. Yes, sez Uncle Ezry, times sure have changed.

Doctor: "To be quite candid with you, your trouble is laziness."

Patient: "Yes, doctor, I know; but what is the scientific name for it? I've got to tell the wife."
