SHE KEPT THE SECRET

Who says a woman can't keep a secret? A certain young couple in Hanover, whom we will call Mr. and Mrs. X, were secretly married for three years, and but for the National Registration Act their marriage would still be concealed from their knowledge of all but the persons concerned. In fact by a clever ruse, they almost managed to keep their secret in spite of the Registration Act. It seems that the couple were very much in love, were clandestinely married before Mr. X left for university three years ago, intending to announce their state of wedlock when he finished his course and became self supporting. Meanwhile, Mrs. X secured employment in town and continued to live at home. —Hanover Post.

Keep Cows To Their Milk

With the price of grain low, and prospects for higher Cream prices, it is wise to keep up the flow of milk, which is often affected to a great extent by leaving milk cows out one or two cold nights It is wise to stable the cows the cold nights, and we feel that you will be well paid for your trouble.

Owing to the natural decrease in production, may we suggest that you sell your entire supply of cream to the Home Creamery, thereby saving unnecessary overhead, particularlp when help is getting scarce on account of army service.
