Britain's King With Troops

King George VI spends more and m[illegible] time visiting British troops and watching their training. In this picture he is seen watching instruction on an anti-tank rifle range. During this visit there was an air raid warning, but His Majesty carried on without interruption.

Lantern Slides Are A War Need Service

The call of war to Canada is also a summons to education. Farmers, artisans, members of the various fighting forces and all immediately concerned in the active maintenance of the sinews of war must be experts in their respective as ever before. Among the results of this call for the intensified knowledge has been an increased demand on the lantern slide service of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. This service is completely known outside a circut of social and educational meetings of agricultural societies, churches, schools, colleges and other institutions interested in the national field of endeavour in the production of food and other agricultural products and by-products. The service comprises many series of lantern slides accompanied by manuscript lectures on a wide variety of subjects. To all intent and purposes it is free, inasmuch as the only outlay is the carriage charge on receipt of the slides. A catalogue of slides may be obtained by writing to Publicity and Extension Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Libya has 26 centuries of known history behind it, during which time it has seen conquerors come and go, but never before has it seen them go at the rate maintained by the Italians.

"Can I help you," said the good-natured person to a man who was unsuccessfully trying to force a mule into a freight car.

"Yes" said the man, "tell me how Noah got two of these blighters into the ark."

X-RAY EXAMINATIONS ARE MADE COMPULSORY

In future every officer struck off strength and every soldier on being discharged from active service in the Canadian Army will undergo an x-ray examination. Reports of these x-rays will form part of the permanent records of all officers and men and must be submitted as part of medical board proceedings before returning to civil life.

Newspaper Advertising Brings In Income Tax

Newspaper publicity and newspaper advertising were credited with the successful early income tax payments. Colin Gibson, minister of national revenue, announced, which had more than met the most optimistic expectations of officials. More than 109,000 taxpayers turned in $35,000,000 during January, it was stated. Of these 80,000 took advantage of instalment payments, while 20,000 paid their taxes in full. "The newspaper counted more than all the circulars put out," Mr. Gibson declared hundreds of letters are still to be opened as the great response flooded the department. Another $5,000,000 is expected as final returns for January to come in.

WHY ARE APPLES SO SCARCE?

We are wondering why apples are so expensive in Ontario. This home-grown fruit has reached such a price that apples are no longer a competitor with tropical or citrous fruits which are shipped in from great distances and on which additional cost is added for exchange. Since the war there has been little, if any, export of apples from Ontario, and the Department of Agriculture has been trying to assist the growers to sell their apples by an avertising campaign, to encourage the public to use more apples. It is going to be pretty difficult to convince the public to do so when apples cost as much as tropical fruits. If under present conditions, apples cannot be marketed at a lower price, serious study should be given to the problem at once or growers will have quantities of apples left on their hands next spring. — Aylmer Express.

Canadian West has more beet sugar than it can readily sell and wheat is in the same class. Not exactly a land of milk and honey, but as far as provisions go something like it.

Horsepower Displaces The Faithful Horse

In the days of Mons, Amiens and the Somme, orses supplied ost of the transport power for an army, and in those days a British Division called for only a handful of motor vehicles, with a total horsepower of 4,000. Today, British Division must possess 2,710 motor vehicles, of 37 different types, with a total horsepower [illegible] vehicular losses at Dunkirk and the necessity of making good these losses -- with the mechanization of the Empire's armies coming increasingly important in Britain's plans -- the Canadian automotive industry has been called upon to assume the lion's share of this though it was already known to be, the industry has achieved wonders in adapting itself to urgent war-time demands. Today, General Motors of Canada alone is producing 215 military units each day for Britain, and an additional 120 units for Australia and India a total of 335 units every twenty-four hours.

Only recently, Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions, when speaking in the house of Commons, predicted that the total output for Canada would soon reach a total of 600 units per day. He also revealed at that time that 30,000 army trucks had been delivered, while he quoted a British statement that Canadian transport equipment was of unsurpassed quality.
