

1992...in the news

• Limehouse resident Ross Carlin and partner Brian Lyon and Halton-Peel MP Garth Turner promoted the release of an updated recording of O Canada. The new recording features several Canadian artists as well as symphonic versions and has been made available to 14,400 schools across Canada.

• Ward 3 Councillor Gail Rutherford can no longer hold her "Meet Gail at the Jail" meetings at the Georgetown police station. Halton Police Staff Inspector Rick Dawson feels her meetings are too political.

• In February, Georgetown residents were shocked after the Georgetown Herald published for the last time.

• In March, a group of citizens' protest cutbacks in library services. Mom Betty Williams said, "In this economic climate I can accept cutbacks, but I think the library is essential."

• In what observers deemed a miracle effort, Halton Leaver Hurricane pee-wees accomplished what no other Canadian team has done—they defeated the powerful Kharkov all-star team from Russia enroute to the winning the Richmond Hill/Vaughan Hockey Tournament.

1992...in the news

• Georgetown Market Place completed its 300,000 sq. ft. expansion in August, doubling the space of the existing plaza and adding 60 new stores. Georgetown Canadian Tire celebrated its official grand opening on March 26.

• Halton Hills regional council Pam Johnston believes Police Chief James Harding is all "image and no substance" and is privately calling for him to be removed from office.

• Sunday in Halton Hills will be a shopping day starting the first Sunday in June. Premier Bob Rae announced a free vote on the issue.

• Norval's Shannon Crawford competed in Barcelona, Spain at the 1992 Olympics as a member of the national rowing team. She came home with a gold medal for the women's eight rowing team.

• Town talks tough: In an unusual move, all future developments in Georgetown South have been put on hold indefinitely until town councillors get a firm commitment from Halton Region on the availability of water and its plans to reconstruct Mountainview Rd.

• In September, the recession took its toll on Smith & Stone, an employer in Georgetown for more than 70 years. The firm closes its doors at the end of the year.

Congratulations! As a new hearing instrument wearer, you have taken a very important step in becoming a better listener and communicator. With a little practice your hearing instruments soon will become second nature to you. As with any device, there are a few "rules" you should know.

Before you leave your hearing care professional's office, make sure your hearing aids feel comfortable in your ears. Don't be afraid to speak up if they don't. Your hearing care professional wants you to wear your hearing aids all the time. So your hearing aids should feel comfortable. If they aren't performing to your expectations, feel free to call.

New technology developed in the past several years can help most people with hearing loss to achieve improved communication. Today's hearing instruments have evolved from simple devices to remarkably sophisticated and technologically advanced personal hearing computers. In just the last few years, more advances in hearing aid technology have been made than throughout history.

In many hearing aids, there are no longer knobs or controls, because the instruments automatically adjust loudness. Some hearing aids are programmed so that they require only the push of a button either on the hearing aid or on a wireless remote control to switch to different listening situations and provide balanced sound in the office, at home, on the telephone, or at a concert. Digital and digitally programmable hearing aids have been introduced that amplify signals in new ways and make the benefits of hearing aids even more customized. Many hearing aids are virtually computers with flexible and sophisticated processors that analyze and respond to specific sounds. Some advanced hearing instruments process sound more than a million times per second.

LEARNING NEW STRATEGIES

A diminished social life is one of the most difficult aspects of age related hearing loss. Many people avoid drawing attention to their hearing loss by having fewer social contacts when it becomes difficult understanding what is being said. The result is an altered and lonely existence that family and friends may mistake for dementia. Learning new strategies to cope with hearing loss could go a long way to restoring confidence and improving communication. The Hearing Clinic recommends the following: Inform people of the hearing loss so they may modify their speech; eliminate background noise; watch the speaker carefully and sharpen natural lip-reading abilities; ask the speaker to repeat what was said if necessary, and above all else, have your hearing thoroughly tested and properly fit with one of today's modern hearing instruments. Contact The Hearing Clinic if you or someone you know needs assistance.
