The Y.P.U. held their regular meeting on Sunday evening, June 14, in the church basement with a good attendance. Mrs. J. Cairns conducted the devotional exercises, after which the missionary convenor, Mrs. Martin, took charge of the discussion period. Sacred poems were read by Jean Proctor, Dorothy Falconer, Marie Phillips, Jean Tudor, Mrs. Cairns and also by Mrs. Martin, who introduced Mrs. F. Keys of Flesherton, who gave the address. Mrs. Keys told the story of the lives of two missionaries in China, beginning with their early life and vividly portraying it, through service to Christ in far off China, where they were martyred by bandits. Her story was very interesting throughout. Mr. Keys rendered a solo "Beneath The Cross," accompanied at the organ by his wife. A vote of thanks and appreciation was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Keys, with the wish that they again visit us on some future occasion. Mrs. Martin read a poem on prayer, after which the president closed the meeting, all singing the hymn "Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus," followed by the Mizpah benediction.

Rev. Dr. Mercer, the Misses Edith and Mabel Betts and Mrs. C. Martin attended the Sunday School convention in Markdale on Thursday afternoon of last week, and report one of the best conventions held for some time. The Misses Betts rendered a beautiful selection entitled "If You Walk in the Light." Dr. Mercer and Mrs. C. Martin took the discussion on "What good is the Sunday School. Dr. Mercer gave ten reasons why folk do not go, while Mrs. Martin gave ten reasons for going. A duet by Messrs. McFadden and Cook was enjoyed. A pleasing feature of the evening session was the singing by the junior choir of Markdale and trios and solos which had won prizes at the Grey musical festival. The addresses given by Rev. Geo. Little of Toronto, and the demonstration teachers' meeting, led by Rev. McMillan, were much enjoyed. The president W. J. Messenger, presided at both sessions.

Buildings Known

splinters. I never saw the guns in Hdye Park in action but one night I did see the searchlights there sweeping their white fingers across the sky.

At the northeast corner of Hyde Park, where Park Lane joins Oxford street in the swankiest part of the city, is the Marble Arch. I don't know what it commemorates, but it's a famous landmark. In the part of the park nearby, there's an open space backed up by masses of trees. It is there that the famous Hyde Park orators hold forth.

I saw them one Sunday afternoon. Each one had a crowd around. They didn't stand on soap boxes, but each had some special arrangement above the crowd, usually a step ladder with one wide step to stand on and a broad top to make a desk or pulpit. They were preaching all kinds of odd doctrines. There was generally a bright banner hung on the front of the step-ladder, with the man's name: "John So-and-So, Christian Anarchist," or something of that kind. Some of them were quite fluent in a loud-mouthed way. Most of the listeners did not seem to be interested, but rather roamed from one group to another — as I did.

Westminster Abbey Disappoints

There were a few things I saw in London which disappointed me and Westminster Abbey was one of them. That's strange. Perhaps it was because part of the big church was shut off, possibly from bomb damage, although none is apparent in the front portion. There is no doubt that the Abbey is a great national shrine, but I found it all cluttered up with ugly statuary and memories of several centuries ago Evidently, the older generations were not so particular about the qualifications of those who were buried in the Abbey, and it may be that tastes in statuary change. I appreciated the tomb of he unknown soldier, but felt that one in every century, Westminster Abbey might be better if a general housecleaning took away some of the old-timers. That may be heresy, but I've given my impressions frankly throughout this series, so won't stop ow.

Outside the Abbey, a soldier stood on guard in front of the door leading to the ancient cloister. My Irish-Canadian guide of that day talked the soldier into letting us inside, because we were Canadians. These ancient cloisters, plain and simple, with the memorials dead long centuries ago, seemed much more beautiful than the interior of the cathedral itself.

The wise fellow who got his next winter's coal early has probably burned half of it by now.

The bombed Germans are being urged to show that they "can take it like the British." Quite a compliment from a sworn enemy.

Your Kind Co-Operation, Please

In order to save our cream patrons embarrassment, we feel it our duty to explain the new government "cream can" regulations of which the dead line is July 2nd. The regulations concerning the producer are :-

1. After July 2nd no one may have in his possession cream cans unless they are used for cream only.
2. A producer may not send or deliver cream to any creamery except in a cream can belonging to that creamery.

In the last two months we have put forth a costly effort to exchange cream cans with other creameries—and now we are giving our patrons entirely our own cans. We are again asking your co-operation to see that the cans are no longer exchanged.
