Timely Precaution: Be Prepared For Any Eventuality

Recent events have brought a direct threat to our homes, our dear ones, our property and our persons. These facts cannot be longer denied. There is no telling where the enemy will strike next or how. Our land, long thought safe, has been shelled by the enemy. The leaders of our country, foreseeing such possibilities, have planned to discourage, and be ready to resist to the utmost, any threat or attempt of subversion here. Their plan is to have every ablebodied man prepared to resist. Resistance to be effective, must be complete. This can only be made possible by efficiency and knowledge. Knowledge can only be obtained by study and efficiency by the application of that knowledge.

The Reserve Army or Defence Force is the plan of our leaders—the answer to any threat or possibility. An efficient defence force can, if ready, repel any enemy likely to invade us. In case of an invasion every man will be needed to turn the enemy back, and the defence of our country is the first duty of all. Enlistment in the Reserve Army is the duty of every able bodied man, to prepare himself for the execution of his role as a defender of his rights. It is a way in which the man who cannot join the active force, the man who is needed to carry on the normal functions of the country, can prepare himself for the possibility of invasion and still perform his normal duties. Preparing ourselves for this means sacrifice, yes, but sacrifice of what? Some of our leisure, some of our pastimes, our pleasures, the sacrifice of a little of our earnings. What are these compared to what we would sacrifice should the enemy overwhelm us? These sacrifices are compensated by the knowledge that you are doing all you can, by the confidence which only knowledge can give, but the pleasure which association with others give, and other pleasantries which are many.

This local Reserve Unit needs men. This is your army, it needs your support. By carrying on in the past it provided the foundation in the way of instructors for that army which so far, has deterred the enemy. Its ranks have been depleted by enlistments. It now needs every available man to be prepared for its next possible job. The Reserve Army is the place where the ex-service man can use to advantage his experience; where the business man can see why training is necessary and costly; where the farmer and farmer's son, whose work is all-important, can serve doubly; where the professional man can apply his store of knowledge; where the youth can find recreation, entertainment and an outlet for his energy; where the low category man can satisfy that desire; where all can learn to be prepared.

The need is such that employers should give thought to arranging their working hours so that their employees can attend drill. They should encourage enlistment and attendance.

The time is at hand for everyone to put their shoulder to the wheel. Ascertain on what nights your local unit trains. Drop in and ask for particulars, then enlist. Be prepared.

Some good people are bringing forth plans and specifications for the world that is to be after this war. Some of the plans may be very good; but we suggest it would be well to win the war before spending much time on them.
