Doctors bury their mistakes and lawyers' errors bring new trials and more business. A judge's mistake may become law, while nobody knows when a preacher gets off the beam. People live in architects' mistakes and very rarely blame a traffic bottleneck on an engineers' error. Even a contractor may cure a badly-figured bid if he can get extra medicine. But when the editor makes a mistake, that's when the shooting starts.

PROFIT ON BOOZE GOES

If a grocer sold a pound of sugar at a profit of 100 per cent he would come into serious conflict with the Price Board, might possibly lose his license. If he made a profit of 200 per cent he would not only be guilty of gross profiteering, he might find himself in jail. If, in addition, he substituted an adulterant for 20 per cent of the sugar, he would find himself faced with a list of charges sufficient to keep him in jail for a long time. But when governments make a profit of at least 200 per cent on liquors and "cut" the product by 20 per cent they are not only within the law, but regard the whole thing as a legitimate and worthy practice. —Calgary Herald.

SELLING EGGS BY WEIGHT IS FAIREST

Members of the Northern Poultry Association believe that the fairest way to sell eggs is by their weight —and the facts support their contention. All eggs are not of similar size and weight. Some flocks yield eggs of large size and other flocks eggs of smaller size. In selling by the dozen the vendor of large eggs gives materially greater value than the man who sells small egs. Yet the cash proceeds are the same. In buying, the fortunate purchaser who gets large eggs receives better value than the purchaser who receives small eggs. It is a case, always, of someone getting too much or someone getting too little. As eggs are not of uniform size, and as it is not to be expected that poultry flocks ever will be so standardized that size uniformity will be the rule, it would seem that the only absolutely fair way would be to sell eggs by weight.

It is possible that the long prevailing custom of selling eggs by the dozen is the result of the obvious convenience of such a method. It may take a little longer to weigh eggs, but once all concerned get accustomed to it, the extra time and trouble will not be so very great. One of the principal benfits will be that the poultry man who takes pride in keeping a flock that produces large eggs will feel that he is getting value and, what is more, encouragement.

Grading of eggs, according to size and freshness has helped egg producers to a large extent, but it appears that absolute fairness to both producer and customer justifies the request for sale by weight. — The St. Catharines Standard.

GREATEST HEALTH PROBLEM

Terming venereal disease "the greatest single public health problem in Ontario," the Health Minister, Dr. R. P. Vivian, disclosed last week that more than 50,000 cases of venereal disease have been reported to the department since the onset of war and that almost 70,000 have been reported in the last seven years, 1937 to 1943, inclusive. In Sweden, Dr. Vivian reports, in 1938 the syphilitics numbered 14 persons per 100,000 of population. In Norway, between 1933 and 1939, 4 out of every 100,000 were affected. And most shocking comparison is this: In Ontario in 1943 there were 175 persons with syphilis per 100,000 of population.

REGARDING ANIMALS WHICH HAVE STRAYED

In police court at Walkerton recently, a man was charged with theft of a steer which had strayed to his premises. Magistrate Walker granted him suspended sentence and gave him, free, some sound advice. This advice might well be taken to heart by all of us.

Whenever any animal strays onto a persons premises, Magistrate Walker declared, the owner or occupant of such premises should do all in his power to discover the owner of the animal. Naturally enough, Magistrate Walker mentioned among such efforts the use of the power of advertising. A notice in the paper is the surest, quickest way to discover the owner. Failing to take such a course renders the party to whose premises an animal has strayed liable to a charge of theft if he unlawfully retains the animal. Magistrate Walker made mention of the fact that the owner of the animal, when found, should be assessed for all costs incurred to the date that the animal is reclaimed by its rightful owner.

Magistrate Walker didn't say, but we imagine the same rule holds good not only to strayed animals, but to articles we may find, on the streets or elsewhere. It's a sad fact, if you are a "finder," but it seems that there's no truth in the old saying "finders keepers.' Of course, if you are a "loser," you'll be glad to learn that "losers weepers" is not a fair deal, in the eyes of the law. — Owen Sound Sun-Times.

Production of ice cream in Canada during 1943 was 12.8 per cent greater than during 1942, and 111.9 per cent greater than during 1938.

R.A.F. Lay Waste to Hamburg

Hamburg, Germany's largest port, second largest city, and the building centre of nearly one third of all its U-boats has suffered the most shattering air attacks of the war. An unparalleled weight of bombs, 2,300 tons one night, 2,300 tons three nights later and 2,300 tons two nights after that, were dropped by the R.A.F. on industrial districts and the dock area. On the night of August 2-3 Hamburg was again attacked, adding to the already extensive devastation of seven square miles — caused by the earlier R.A.F. attacks and daylight raids by the U.S.A.A.F. Picture taken before the R.A.F.'s heavy attack on the night of August 2-3 shows:
