FEDERATION NEWS

(By Clifford Allen, President Grey County Federation of Agriculture)

What is the Federation's responsibility toward young people?

Twenty-five years ago many of our young people made the supreme sacrifice in a war to end war. This left an abnormal gap between the ages of the older and the younger generation of today, with the result that the younger folk in their twenties and early thirties seem like mere children to the older folk and they hesitate to give them responsibility either in the management of their farms, farm organizations or municipal affairs.

A great many young people feel very keenly about this situation, because they realize that in a very few years the entire responsibility, even to governing the country, is going to be dropped on their shoulders and they are not going to be properly prepared for the work.

Why does this condition exist? Are our young people not capable? If not, why does the military service take the young and only the young? What is there that the Federation of Agriculture can do to better the siuation?

On April 5th the rural committee of the Canadian Youth Commission called a "Youth Hearing," endeavoring to find definite answers to some of the problems facing rural youth today.

It was the general consensus of opinion that there has been a definite lack of education for rural life. Often we find teachers in our public schools who have come from large towns and cities and have not the rural background necessary for the upbringing of our rural children. Then they go on to high school, where education tends to lead them into other professions at the expense of the rural population. It was decided that some attempt should be made to bring education to those in their late 'teens and early twenties, who are now on the farms. District short courses and local folk schools were suggested as possible mediums through which to work.

Something must also be done to make farm life more attractive to young people. On account of the unbalanced economic conditions many of our young people have left rural communities. This is particularly true of farm girls, especially since the outbreak of this present war. The result is that young men, who wish to marry and establish homes, often find it very difficult to locate suitable life partners. This is not a laughing matter, but a serious situation in the light of the future of this nation.

In many cases our young people cannot start up on a farm of their own, owing to the lack of sufficient capital. Even if they do take over the family farm it is often mortgaged for as much as it is worth. We should devise some means of providing credit for these young farmers at a low rate of interest, not more than 1½%, and for long periods of time, up to possibly 40 years. There is no doubt but that the Federation should give more attention to the needs of our rural youth. At the some time, this article should be a challenge to young people to get behind the Federation and make it work for them.

If it is true that we are depending on the youth of the country to defend us against our enemies, then they should also be capable as executives of our farm organizations, on school boards, representing us in governments, etc.
