How The Soldier Get His Pay

Have you ever witnessed an Army pay parade? On approximately the fifteenth and last days of each month the Canadian soldier marches up to the paymaster, salutes smartly and picks up his semi-monthly stipend.

On pay parades the soldiers line up first in order of rank - from N.C.O. down to private - and then each group of ranks is sorted alphabetically. The paymaster with a huge bundle of cash in front of him and guarded by an armed N.C.O., hands out each warrior's pay according to a list prepared by the Pay Office.

Names are called out by an N.C.O. who sits at the paymaster's side and as the soldiers step forward, displaying their identification cards to prove they are the legitimate would-be recipients, they sign their names beside their listing.

Then they march in front of the paymaster, salute, take their pay, step back two paces, salute, and wheeling regimentally to their left or right, march away.

The amount of pay each soldier receives is governed by many circumstances. Rank, of course, holds priority. Each promotion means more pay, and the Paymasters of each unit are kept busy readjusting their books to take care of these monetary boosts.

The purchase of Victory Bonds by installments, the payment of insurance, assignments to wives or other dependents, the fines for drunkenness or loss of equipment - all these influence how strongly the ghost will walk.

Actually, the Army is only required to pay its civilian employees each month-end. The fifteenth of the month pay, called "Advance Pay," is a kind gesture by the military to help the soldier better adjust his or her finances.

While soldiers cannot make loans against their pay, they canb be advanced more than their allotment when going on furlough, when being transferred for temporary duty in a place where barrack accommodation is not available or when going on compassionate leave.

All in all, the main difference between the soldier and the civilian on pay-days is that the former lines up and salutes to collect. One never hears any objection to this regulation - discipline is as important on pay parades as it is on the battel-fields, and as far as Canada's warriors are concerned, where could one find a more pleasant way to illustrate disciplinary teaching.

The first question asked by German airmen after landing by parachute in the metropolis was, "Is this London?" When our pilots bail out they ask, "Was this Berlin?"—Punch.

Creemore Boy Writes His Mother on D-Day

The following interesting letter from Sgt. Pilot Jack Pedlar was written in a R.C.A.F. camp in England on June 6th, the day of the great invasion. In another letter Jack tells of a visit to Sherwood Forest, the old haunt of Robin Hood.

RCAF, England,
June 6, 1944, No. 29.

Dearest Mom:

Well. this is it- As I dared to predict to you not long. ago, all hell broke loose here this morning, and I could not help but think I was in your thoughts. A thousand questions are at this moment racing through your mind as must be the case with countless others at home.

If anyone asked me. "What is an Englishmen's virture," I believe I could answer quite easily: he waits patiently and with confidence in the face of odds or anxiety for an outcome which he seems to know will come in its own good time.

The reaction of these people- this morning to the news would surprise you. They talk quietly among themselves—and most of them wear a smile of complacency on their faces- a smle of inward satis'action, and they are recalling the years 1940-41 and what Jerries' aircraft did to their cities. But they're not filled with revenge—rather a desire to liberate those more unfortunate than themselves. For I don't think London's smile will assume its broadest aspect until Paris smiles. They seem to me to be related. They're show places that seem to be interwoven.

I don't think there can be much doubt of the outcome. And the fact that Canadians were one of the three invading forces reassures me further. But at a time like this. people turn to God and pray. That is because they realize they finally need His help. What a pity it requires a thing so vital as this to reveal to some the worth of His intervention-

Mother. please don't think me a sissy for saying this. I certainly wouldn't want that. Take your bible and read carefully and slowly Psalms, chapters 4, 6, 20, 25. In them you find an answer to anyone needing prayer. In Psalms 42 and 51 many times have I found peace both within my soul and within my mind. Often I become afraid and I turn to 42 and 51. Then I an rest and, yes, una fraid. Are you surprised or ashamed when I say I often become afraid? Don't be. I'm not ashamed to say it. Though I know a lot who wouldn't. In Psalms 42 and 51 I find something I can find no where else. Perhaps, Mom, you wonder where I learned of the benefits of those particular chapters of God's word. Again, I guess, I should ask you not to think me a sissy or a good little boy who never does anything wrong. Well. I'll tell you. I have a little Bible in Air Force blue leather given me by Aunt Deila when ˇ got my wings. When I was first in this country and on a long train ride. for want of something to read to pass the time, I used to take this little book from my pocket and read it. Then when I started flying it became a habit.

OVERSEAS LETTERS

The following letter was received recently by Mrs. John Nuhn from Flying Officer Geo. Mitchell, who is in France with the RCAF:

The cigarettes from your committee come with such regularity that they tend to be taken for granted but I assure you they are appreciated. I am sure the people overseas in the last war were not so well looked after as those in this war. I know that I have wanted for nothing since I came to England and France.

I have been unfortunate in that I don't seem to run into anyone from the home town over here. Lillian Bunt's husband visited our airfield for a day and it was pleasant to see him. Gregory Clark had an article in the issue of June 6th of the Star Weekly which told of the activities of our unit. Incidentally he is with us and gets as much pleasure as I do from the Flesherton Advance. We are both intensely interested in what is happening in your town.

The effort of the community is wonderful but they may well be proud of the Canadian Army troops which covered themselves with glory in the initial assault. The Air Force boys certainly hand it to them. I was fortunate in coming to France over the beaches which the Candaian troops had taken. I was proud. Again many thanks.

George Mitchell.

GOOD CROPS THIS YEAR

This district has harvested a fine crop of grain this fall. All the grain has been cut and most of it is in the barns. Mr. Jas. Russell of Rock Mills last week threshed nine acres of oats and barley and had 350 bushels in the bins, the oats weighing 40 pounds to the bushel. They should make splendid seed oats. The past three weeks there has been an entire absence of rain and the pastures are very dry at the present time.

A freak accident, in which an ancient model coupe succeeded in derailing a freight train and causing substantial damage, took place at the C.P.R. crossing at Craighurst about 8.20 a.m. a week ago Tuesday.
