Valedictory

To the People of South Grey,
Ladies and Gentlemen:

Before this letter appears in your local paper it will be no news to you that, at the end of this month, my position as Inspector of Schools terminates, and that having reached the age of retirement from the Civil Service, I shall no longer be in charge of this important work.

During the ten years I have worked with you I realize that I have made many friends and it is with great regret that I must sever official relations with you and retire to private life. In doing so, however, I wish to thank all of you, teachers, trustees, secretaries and ratepayers for the share of confidence placed in me during the period that I have been privileged to be with you.

To an Inspector of schools the great defect in our educational system is the inequality of advantage given to rural children over those from urban centres, more particularly in regard to High School training, but for many years the various Ministers of Education have made so many improvements in this matter that now rural children have advantages equal to those of the towns. It remains merely for the rural ratepayers to take advantage of the munificent offers of assistance given by the Department of Education

GEO. E. PENTLAND

In saying good-bye, my chief message is, of course, to the boys and girls. It is clear that in a few short years you will be called upon to assume life's responsibilities as the men and women of the times, and in order to fulfil your duties to society and to the world at large, you must be well educated, have a clear mind and be idealists of the highest type. In addition to this you must have a clear realization of the rights of all with whom you come in contact.

Just where I shall be in the future is more or less uncertain but I trust our mutual regard will always be maintained. At my time of life I shall not change much in appearance, but you boys and girls will quickly grow up to manhood and womanhood, and hence when we meet I may not know you. But wherever you see me, whether on land or sea, be sure you come and tell me who you are and it will be pleasant to have a little chat over old times.

The new inspector for South Grey, who will take charge at once, is Mr. William G. Rae, B.A., a young man who will be glad to be of assistance in any way, and who will be popular with boys and girls, with teachers and with the public in general.

Again wishing you all success in the years to come, I am

Very sincerely,
Geo. E. Pentland.

Mr. Geo. E. Pentland, a familiar friend to many boys and girls in South Grey as well as older people will retire from active life the end of this month when Mr. William G. Rae will assume Inspectorial duties.

Mr. Pentland was born in Thornbury but his childhood days were spent at Heathcote, in the beautiful Beaver Valley, where he attended public school. At the age of sixteen he began teaching, his first school being U.S.S. No. 16, Collingwood. After three years on a Third Class certificate he obtained his Second Class and later his First, after which he attended the College of Education at Hamilton, obtaining there a First Professional Certificate. After several more years in Continuation school work he taught one year in Stratford Collegiate, and while there he obtained his B.A. degree extra-murally. Leaving Stratford he went to Queen's University for two years at the end of which time he obtained his M.A. with first class honours in mathematics. After this Mr. Pentland was principal of the High Schools at Thorold, Beamsville and Williamstown, and later of the Collegiate Institute at Vankleek Hill. For the last twenty-four years, however, he has been an Inspector of Public Schools, first in the County of Haliburton for twelve years, then two at Sharbot Lake and the last ten in South Grey.

During the ten years of official duty in South Grey, Mr. Pentland has taken a very personal interest in the boys and girls throughout his inspectorate. In 1939 at the time of the Royal visit to Toronto he was chiefly responsible for the arrangements whereby many rural children were privileged to see the King and Queen. The same year he made a handsome contribution to his native municipality at Heathcote In the last issue of this paper Mr Pentland was credited with being instrumental in starting the custom of holding an annual picnic for the aged residents of the Grey County Home. These are only a few of his "good works".

Mr. Pentland has travelled widely, having been around the world, has been across the Atlantic seven times, visited every state in the American union as well as every province in Canada. As a result of his vast knowledge of the sights of the world, he has given many educational and interesting travelogues as well as other informative talks.

Besides the keen interest he has taken in schools, he has been equally interested in events of current interest and has been a benefactor for South Grey.

Possessed of a pleasing personality Mr. Pentland is a friend of every teacher with whom he has been associated and of the boys and girls by whom he will be missed.

South Grey has just cause for gratitude to Mr. Pentland for establishing such a splendid record of achievement. In his retiring from active duty, it is hoped that he may enjoy a full measure of good health and well deserved rest for many years to come.
