What can you do to take care of your car?

Time to prepare your car for winter

Whether you like it or not, October is here, harkening the return of Old Man Winter as the trees get bare and the days ever shorter. Yes, this means once again having to prepare your car or light truck for the cold season.

Luckily for us, today's vehicles are better built than ever. They are also much more reliable. Unluckily for us, that is exactly why few motorists really take the time to properly maintain their cars and trucks. In the best cases, owners simply drop the vehicle off at the garage and let the staff there prepare the car for winter. In the worst cases, owners just ignore the whole issue until a little red warning light starts blinking on the dashboard controls.

Not everybody owns a late model car or has the means to entrust their vehicle to a dealer. That is where your local mechanic will be able to help you out by verifying all the fluids in the vehicle, checking some of the mechanical and electrical points that need to be serviced, and installing winter tires. More and more Canadian drivers are getting the picture that winter tires are a necessity for cold-weather driving.

*Winter is hard on cars in Canada.
Take good care of them and prepare them for the cold.*

A car owner can also do his or her own part in preparing their vehicle by washing and preparing the body with a good wax job and putting a little oil on some body parts here and there. Those who plan to keep their vehicle for the long haul will have its underbody and structure treated with a rust inhibitor. Don't doubt it for a second: caring for your vehicle before winter is the best way to make it last.
