TOURIST SEASON NOW IN FULL SWING

While the real swing into the summer holiday season does not usually get under way until after July 1st owing to the fact that the schools remain in operation up to that time, there is already a large influx of tourists at many summer resorts in this district, and it is more than probable that after the first of the month it will be next to impossible to find an empty cottage.

It is reported from the Manitoulin Island that already the most of the cottages are occupied, and with very few exceptions by American tourists, the majority of whom own their own cottages there. Some come early because of business reasons and there are any number of instances of cottages being owned jointly by two or three families, each of which take their turn in occupancy, thus making use of the cottage during the entire summer. This condition also prevails in the Bruce peninsula and along the shores of Lake Huron and Georgian Bay.

All this is an indication of what might be expected under more normal conditions, particularly with regard to visitors from the United States. It must be remembered that the people of that country are still engaged right up to the hilt in their war effort against the Japanese, which means that they are not as free for vacations as they otherwise might be. It is not difficult, therefore to visualize what is likely to take place in the future, and Canada and Ontario should be prepared to take care of this, the largest industry outside of farming, in the country. There are still many communities in Ontario which have not fully comprehended the possibilities of the tourist business, but which possess many natural advantages which need only to be developed. The time to prepare for the overdue expansion of the tourist business in this country is the present. — Owen Sound Sun Times.

An Old Prophecy

(Dundalk Herald)

James Inkster of Dundalk showed The Herald the following interesting prophecy, published in the Oracdian, which is printed in his native Islands. These lines are at least 333 years old and are copied from a tombstone, dated 1642, in Kempbie churchyard, Essex:

When pictures look alive, with movements free;
When ships, like fishes, sail beneath the sea;
When men, outstripping birds, can span the sky,
Then half the world, deep drenched in blood, shall die.

TELEPHONE BOOKS DELIVERED

Over 10,000 copies of the new telephone directory for Owen Sound, Flesherton, and vicinity were dropped in the mail this week. Abotu 300 of them are being distributed to subscribers in this community.

Among the names with the most listings in the Owen Sound section, the leaders are the Browns, followed by the Taylors and Wilsons.

In the Flesherton section, there are no outstanding names, thus making it easier to avoid calling the wrong Mr. Brown.

According to G. H. Houston, Bell Telephone manager in this area, the new book contains about 2,300 listings new and changed from those of the last issue, including a number in the Flesherton section.

"To conserve paper in wartime, directories are now issued at less frequent intervals than in former years, so that it is important to consult the new directory carefully before placing calls, and to bring desk lists and memo pads up to date," Mr. Houston said. "Avoiding unnecessary calls to wrong numbers helps us to serve you better, despite wartime difficulties."

It is hoped that on receiving the new books, telephone users will contribute the old ones to the regular salvage collection, paper being still in great demand.

HEAVY RAINS MAKE RIVERS OVERFLOW

Heavy rains from Friday afternoon to late Sunday afternoon has resulted in considerable delay to farmers with haying. Many fields were flooded to a depth of a foot or more and low-lying gardens were inundated with water and considerably damaged. Many rivers have overflowed their banks, resembling the spring freshets. High winds have flattened spring grain and hay crops and the making of hay has been greatly retarded. The grass is soft and will be difficult to cure.

Sunday the Beaver River, emptying into the Hydro lake at Eugenia, was filled from bank to bank and water was flowing over the 1400 foot cement dam at Eugenia from end to end in a white cascade of water. The famous falls were back to their old time beauty and the river in the gorge below the falls was a mass of white tumbling water as it roared over the great bolders in the river bed. One wonders why the Hydro authorities allow the water to flow over the top of the dam, as the cement has become worn with the action of the water and in places large chunks of concrete nave been washed away. Stop timber in the spillway of the dam have not been taken out to allow the water to escape in the manner originally provided for it. In fact the sluice gates in the dam have not been used for some time. It has been stated they are rusted shut and cannot be opened.

WANT OF WATER MEANS LESS EGGS

Water for hens is an important item in egg production, particularly during hot weather. Hens require an abundance of clean, fresh water before them at all times, and especially at laying time—the early morning and afternoon. Hens have no sweat glands. They depend on their lungs to throw off body moisture. Prolonged lack of water entails parched lungs and suffering.

Lack of sufficient fresh water results in lowered egg production, and egg quality is lowered when hens are forced to drink dirty stagnant water. A hen seeks a drink of water the first thing after leaving a nest and she will drink more water when it is kept fresh than when it is changed only once a day. Every egg is wanted to meet the demand.

RABBIT MOTHERS CHICKENS

The Elora Express tells of a Salem lady who set a hen with twelve eggs only one of which hatched. In disgust, she removed the chicken and sent its mother back to the pen to lay eggs while the orphan was given to a duck. The duck, however, would have none of it and in desperation the lady cast her eye on a rabbit whose mate had died, and it was not even a mother rabbit at that. What was her surprise to find that the combination worked perfectly. The chicken snuggles up to the rabbit at night and finds fur an excellent substitute for feathers. It eats its meals in peace and amity with its four legged protector and sits comfortably on its back in between meals. Altogether it has proved a perfect though unusual solution.
