IS IT "ADEQUATE" FIDO?

• The house that suited Fido last summer, when he was a pup, is quite inadequate now. It will take a major operation to bring it up to present needs. When you wire your farm, remember that your use of electricity will grow too. Prevent needless cost and inconvenience later by doing a complete wiring job the first time. Provide fully for future as well as immediate requirements.

If you are like most people, you will begin electrification of your farm with a moderate amount of new equipment. The wise thing to do is to get "working equipment" first . . . things that will save labor and money, and increase production. Electric lights and a motor or two for grinding and pumping are typical "firsts". As your farm becomes more profitable through the use of low-cost Hydro, you will add many home conveniences, and also many valuable aids for the barn, tool house and dairy. If you provide wiring and sufficient outlets from the beginning to serve all these you will save money and have "adequate wiring".

Any good electrical contractor or your Hydro rural superintendent will be glad to advise you on how to wire your farm wisely.

Another of our local servicemen has been granted his discharge in the person of Harold Jackson. Harold enlisted in September, 1942, training in different centres in New Brunswick. In April, 1943, he went overseas were he saw service in many places. He was on a secret move, which originated in North Africa and took him through such places as Italy, Holland, Belgium, etc. He was unlucky, being twice wounded, first in Italy, suffering a thigh wound, then in Holland, suffering a bad leg wound. His first wound prolonged his stay in hospital two months. The latter wound was inflicted at the finale of European war, early in May, when Harold was so unfortunate as to step on a mine. He was so badly wounded this time as to necessitate the ampuaion of a leg below the knee. He reached his home on July 1, 1945. During his military services, Harold attained the rank of Lance Sergeant. Due to further hospitalization care since his homecoming in July, he was not granted his discharge until last Monday, March 11, 1946. He is now employed with J. E. McCague, Alliston.

Two more local men, Renfred Acheson and Wm. Nixon, who have been stationed at Camp Borden for some time have been granted seven days leave, pending their discharge to be made effective at the end of that time.

At time of writing we learn that Mr. Albert Stinson's condition is quite poorly. Nurse Smith of Feversham will be in attendance today (Monday). Dr. R. W. Lindsay, Dundalk, is the attending physician. We hope for Mr. Stinson, who has been such an active pioneer gentleman, a speedy recovery to good health.
