$70,000 BULL ARRIVES IN CANADA

THE BABY BRIDEGROOM—PITTODRIE UPRIGHT

Five hundred dollars wouldn't buy a hair on the tail of Pittodrie Upright, a shorthorn bull which has arrived in Saint John, N.B., from Scotland. Known to Scotsmen as the "baby bridegroom," Pittodrie Upright cost his owner, Ralph Smith, Missouri rancher and lumber king, nearly $70,000, and the total bill will probably amount to $100,000 before he takes up residence at the Sni-a-Bar ranch. Insurance alone cost about $5,000. To justify his owner's huge investment, young Upright is expected to produce 50 to 70 calves a year, and his breeding life is expected to last about six or seven years. Down in Missouri he will hob-nob with pedigree shorthorns of aristocratic breeding from Scottish herds. Owner Smith hopes that he will promote U.S. commercial cattle of the finest quality in the rich Missouri valley land. Meanwhile, Upright hopes that his reputation as "the best shorthorn bull in all Scotland" will carry some weight in the U.S.

SPOTS OF SPORTS

By FRANK MANN HARRIS
("A Six Bit Critic")

Seems as though our Russian allies still have quite a long way to go before they catch on to proper sports etiquette, and learn the correct method of dealing with certain sporting situations that crop up from time to time. For here we have a Soviet soccer team that travels to England, the very cradle of the game, and comes up with a mark of two wins, two ties, and no losses against top-ranking Old Country clubs — truly a very smart record and one probably never equalled. So what do the Russians do? They go back home and put the blast on the English, accusing them of a cold reception, rough play, poor sportsmanship and a lot seven other things, none of them complimentary.

* * *

Now a Canadian, or a British, or a United States team, travelling to foreign climes, would never be guilty of anything like that. No indeed! Athletes from those countries, with their much longer tradition of sportsmanship behind them, would have saved those kinds of squawks to use as an alibi after some trip on which they got the living tar beat out of them.

* * *

However, the whole thing is just one more chunk of evidence — if any were needed—as to the immense value of international sport competition in promoting brotherhood, amity and good-fellowship among the peoples of the world. So come on with those Olympic games! We can't hardly wait.

* * *

All things considered, perhaps it is just as well that those rickety old Hamilton Tigers knocked off Montreal Royals in three straight and are not liable to be displaying their wares in these parts for a while. Down at Maple Leaf Gardens last Satrday you could see fans wandering around with that dazed, 'How long has this been going on?' expression on their pans; and it wouldn't take many more samples of the real hockey the Tigers play to make a lot of folks suddenly wake up and holler, "Hey, what is this stuff they've been feeding us these past few years?"

* * *

To us the most interesting feature of any sport is watching the antics of those who follow it—and for that purpose the noble pastime of horse-racing tops them all by many lengths. For The Sport of Kings seems to have something that brings out any latent streak of nuttiness in a fuller degree than anything else.

* * *

There was the man we knew, for instance, whose first action on entering the paddock at Woodbine was always to go and solemnly rub his knuckles on the bark of a certain tree. He claimed that doing so brought him luck; and maybe it did, although we recall that he was generally broke around the fifth race every day, even as you and we.

Then there was the lady who religiously attended the races every day and never once, in all the years we knew her, watched a single race — probably never even set eyes on a horse. No matter whether it was a King's Plate or a $700 claiming race, she would be down under the stand, in an alleyway leading to the mutuels, with her eyes shut, clutching tightly in her fist the ticket on the horse she had wagered on, pulling for it to come down in front.

* * *

Watching her, you'd swear that she was suffering the tortures of the da——unblessed. She had plenty of money, and winning or losing her bets didn't make any real difference to her. Yet there she was, day after day, track after track—in fact, the only way you could have kept her away would be by main force.

* * *

And—although he is by no means in the class of the nuts we have mentioned — we once knew a man who, while he took an intense interest in the start of every race, didn't give a hoot about how they finished.

* * *

It was at Thorncliffe one afternoon that Marshall Cassidy—then the official starter on Eastern Canadian tracks—invited us to go over and watch him start a race over at the six furlong post. It was the fifth or sixth race of the day; and on our way across the infield we happened to mention something about the result of a previous race. To our amazement Cassidy didn't know what horse had won that race—or any of the others. His business was to get them away to a good start. After that — well, he wasn't greatly interested.

What Is A Subsidy And Who Pays It?

Just as a national debt is something we owe ourselves, so is a subsidy a tax that we all pay, says the Hamilton Spectator. It is often very much the concern of the politicians that the public should just forget that fact, but when they start falling over themselves in adjustments, then it is time to take note.

Now that the subsidy has been taken off milk, it makes no difference to the producer, but the consumer pays the difference. Who was paying the difference before? "Government," of course; but our old friend "Government," using the taxpayers' viz., the consumers' money to pay it. The joyful thing about it for "Government" is that anything that is not immediately visible doesn't seem to bother people so much — until they suddenly wonder what's going on about their taxes and the cost of living.

The average amount of electricity in a lightninig flash is far less than the amount that can be charged into a storage battery.

.....as pointed out in a previous column, with the increased consumption of fluid milk, the production of butter would fall off considerably. This has been proven in the latest production reports. In Southern Ontario production as of the same dates in 1945, has dropped off approximately 428,997 lbs.

Railway Renamed Ontario Northland

Changing the name of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway to that of the Ontario Northland is designed to avoid confusion with another line in the United States with identical initials, says the Windsor Star. The new title, however, is to be welcomed for other reasons.

The old name seemed to have a local, restrictive flavor. It bore the impression of an unimportant little spur line. As the Ontario Northland the road will carry, in its title, a sense of the broad expanses of the province. The words have a romantic ring, they display imagination that will be attractive to visitors. They are, in every way, better.

UNO Incorrect It's Just U.N. Now

You may be accustomed to seeing the United Nations Organization abbreviated to UNO—but you can say farewell to the term right in this sentence. The United Nations has ruled that no such abbreviation correctly exists. The final "O" is out, for although the United Nations is an organization, the word "organization" does not properly appear in its title.

From now on, at the request of United Nations officials, the abbreviation will be U.N. Pronounce it as you see fit, but don't mistake it for the negative prefix.

Ode To Peace

The war is won, and there is peace the length and breadth of terra firma (except in Java, China, Greece, Malaya, Palestine, and Burma). There's peace, and freedom evermore has now become the Big Idea (except in Syria, Singapore, Romania, India, and Korea). There's freedom fine and bright and new, to hail year-round in terms effusive (except from New Year's morning to December 31st, inclusive).

Scientists Hail Great Discovery

The denaturation of plutonium and of uranium-235, announced in Washington last week, is the great discovery that scientists have been hoping for to make it possible to produce atomic power.

This discovery may mean that a piece of metal the size of a watermelon will produce as much heat as hundreds of tons of the uranium now used to make atomic fires.

The huge atomic piles in Washington state, each about the bulk of a small pyramid, produced enough heat nearly to equal the peak electric power expected from the Grand Coulee dam. But this atomic heat was useless for power because it was spread over such a large area.

Heat that makes power, such as boiler fires, is concentrated in a small area. It was not possible, when the war ended, to use a small amount of uranium-235 or of plutonium to make an atomic fire because such concentrated pieces of either metal would instantly explode. Denaturing is described as plode, but without stripping their rendering the metals unable to exability to produce heat by the explosion of their atoms.

The discovery means that probably a few hundred pounds of the purified metals will operate a large power plant for a year, or for years, instead of the millions of tons of old-time fuels.
