CUSTOMERS' SUGGESTION CORNER

For Rural Telephone Service

One Customer Writes:
"Do something about children using the telephone as a play-thing"

WE know it's not always easy to keep little ones from playing with the telephone, or their older brothers and sisters from spending too much time on the line. We can only remind you that, until rural facilities can be increased, it is important for everyone to keep their calls as brief as possible.

If you have growing children, you can be particularly helpful in preventing needless inconvenience and delays. We ask your co-operation.

"ADEQUATE" UP TO A POINT!

● These ducklings have outgrown the capacities of the hen mother, which were adequate only to a point. Similarly, electric wiring designed to serve only a limited beginning, will soon become inadequate to growing needs and a costly hindrance to progress on your farm.

When you prove for yourself how Hydro energy can save money and labor for you, you will want to use more electric equipment. That will put a bigger load on your wiring, and the best time to provide for that added use is when you wire the first time.

Overloading wastes power. Energy lost by overloading an electric wire that is too small can cost you more than the extra money required for adequate wiring in the first place. Install the proper size wire and provide plenty of circuits to divide up the load, and you will be sure of better economy and more satisfactory operation of your equipment. Be sure, too, that you have lots of "convenience outlets" so that you can "plug in" a lamp, a motor, or other electrical device where and when you want to.

In wiring your farm it will pay you well to be guided by a qualified electrical contractor. Also, your Hydro Rural Superintendent will gladly advise you.
