High School News

(THE ASTONISHER

Some call this part of our paper "The Students' Conscience" and some call it ',The Cockeyed Corner," but whatever you like to call it, we hope that you will enjoy reading it and get something out of it. The less you get out of it, that is sensible, the more certain you can be that education pays,—and after all that is what we students are trying to prove —that there are too many sensible people in this world, and not enough happy ones. In addition to making people (not teachers) happy, we stand for the rights of the student: to get a ride in the bus in the morning, to get fifty marks on any examination, to fall in love with the kid sitting in front of him, and to never have to go home with more than two books in his schoo'bag at night. If you keep these things in mind when you read our paper, you will enjoy it, allright.

GRADE 9

Pat and Emily really have it bad. We hope it isn't contagious. Gwen certainly is popular with the opposite sex. What is the recipe, Gwen? Lorna will just have to stop making eyes at the boys, as it is becoming serious. It's too bad that the bicycles weren't running, isn't it, Joan and George? It's too bad Norm didn't go to this schoo', Bonnie! The roads are very slippery to Kimberley. Too bad Mary Jane!

Sherlock Holmes, our school detective, is now looking for another after-school date. What happened, Hodgins? Too bad there weren't chairs in the little room. The table is rather uncomfortable, Shaw. Iona Wood seems to have charmed Big Bob from Second Form. What about Little Bob in First? You're keeping rather late hours lately, Bob! You've got to get used to it!

GRADE 10

Bob seems to be losing quiet a bit of sleep over a certain red head, but he catches up on it in the mornings when he doesn't go to school. We have a remedy for our 9 o'clock sleepiness. After McTavish walks up stairs we are all awake. Our Joan has quite a crush on a certain boy in first form. Watch out, Gordon! There must be something very interesting in "the little room," because Plester works terribly hard to get in there. Some morning, Jack, we will surprise the class and have our homework done when we get to school.

GRADE 11

Bryce Benson seems to have a hard time hiding his head when the teachers get angry. For some reason Irene has a hard time keeping her books together. That gal's got a lively tongue in her head, too. You should see it shoot out and her face get red when she is corrected for using it at the wrong time. McGee has had a very sore toe since he was playing football with that schoolbag in Grade 9 room. The green Geographies are receiving considerable hard usage these days and not just from Grade 9 students either. Turney wants to be careful or he will be expelled, eh Mr. Goheen? Too much of that re-headed stuff.

.... GRADE 12 ....

We, the great historians of Fourth Form, are certainly the best. I mean in every class but History. "Thurston, go in the little room! Miss Stauffer, face the front! Miss McCracken, take the front seat, please." Of course you know where these words come from! It does get tiresome, don't you think? One would think we were mere children of the public school. But how is Thurston expected to know his Hiscory when he spends his time lying on the floor of the little room.

We all seem to be improving in Latin, don't you think, Mrs. Mercer? I mean, when we do our homework. Of course, we all like Algebra, don't we, Mrs. Goheen? And we really do enjoy our arguments in English period, especially Marion, when you said your prayers the night before. Emma was at Young People's Friday night, but it must have been late when she couldn't get up the next morning until noon.

We do wish Shirley would make up her mind. But then you do have a good time, don't you Shirley? And Blanche, we know you are really lonesome, but there will be other skating carnivals. You do remember don't you? Evelyn and Roy are still fighting, but I guess they like it. So go to it! Gwen, do you have a boy friend? If so, let us know. We like variety. We think that Barbara will be a farmer's wife. She hasn't quite made up her mind yet. Betty, how do you do it. Week ends really prove profitable for you, eh? How's Don after that?

GRADE 12

Doug. Falconer: Open the door, Richard, and let me out of the little room.

Clement: (Sounds like Influence talking) Come on out, Influence.

Wanted — A wife suitable for a minister. Apply to Rev. D. McLeod.

Eleanore Williams wishes the weather was warmer, as it is pretty cold around the "Barnes."

Notice — We will not supply Don McLeod with ink any longer. Dated at F.H.S. this 7th day of February, A.D.1947. — Betty Tucker and Marge Martin.

We feel sorry for poor wee Jean Co (because she can't get home week ends, but "absence makes the heart grow fonder."

Nancy would have no trouble answering English questions if she only knew the answers.

Lost — Sixty golden minutes of time in the vicinity of "the little room." For Pete's sake "les trouvez vitement."

GOALIE STOPS THEM EVEN AS SPECTATOR

Don Banks, who minds the net for Flesherton is due for a citation from the association of goalkeepers for performance beyond the call of duty —unwittingly or therwise.

As a spectator at the Markdale-Dundalk tilt at Dundalk Wednesday evening of last week, Don was standing along the boards in the vicinity of where a puck disappeared after it cleared the boards. After a futile search, a new puck was tossed in and the game continued.

A short time before the end of the game, Banks put his hand in the pocket of his coat and — you guessed it — there was the missing puck!
