What Goes On In The World

By NORMAN BLAIR

Italy

Late this month Italy's voters—some 27 million are eligible—will go to the polls and elect the first Parliament under the Italian Republic. A fierce propaganda fight is in progress, for on the result of this election may hinge the whole matter of at least a temporary peace, or the outbreak of a conflict which may very well flare into World War Three.

Of recent years Communism in that country has been growing greatly in strength, principally among the impoverished and land-hungry peasants, who eagerly swallow the glowing promises of the farms and prosperity that will be theirs—after the Russian pattern—made by Communist workers.

With The Pope as spokesman, the Vatican has thrown its full authority behind the anti-Communist drive—and the recent proposals by Britain, France and the United States that Trieste would be restored to Iitaly has been a bitter blow to the Reds. But the situation is still highly critical, and no matter which side ultimately wins the election there is almost certain to be rioting and bloodshed before the voting is over, and possibly afterwards as well.

Palestine

Palestine still remains—and is likely to do so for some time—a definite danger spot. The British are adamant in their resolve to withdraw entirely from that unhappy country, and who can really blame them? The Jews have expressed determination of proclaiming a sovereign Jewish state—probably to be called Judea—on May 16th.

President Truman has asked for a postponement—not, he explains, an abandonment—of the partition plan; but this doesn't seem to offer much hope, seeing that there are plenty of fanatics among both the Arabs and the Jews who would prefer to see the whole world in flames rather than yield an inch from the stand they have taken. The President also called on the Arabs and Jews to arrange an immediate truce in order to "avert tragedy"; but Arab representatives would agree to this only if partition is "completely abandoned".

So it goes! Should the United States send troops to enforce the terms of partition, there would be nothing to stop the Russians claiming the right to take similar action—and Red forces in Palestine would be a grave threat to Arabia and all the rich oil territory in that region. Meanwhile, the guerrilla warfare between Arabs and Jews continues without sign of abatement.

Scandinavia

If the Russians intend to expand still futher into Western Europe, their action will probably take place during the coming Summer and Fall. A year from now the nations of "the Atlantic community" should be, because of the Marshall plan, much stronger and better able to offer resistance to such a move, and with the United States likely to be chiefly occupied with election affairs, it looks like now or never for the Reds.

Although communism is by no means strong in either country, people in Norway and Sweden are jittery. With both countries bordered by Finland—already in effect a part of the Soviet military system—they would appear to be in real danger of Russian aggression, for in diplomatic circles two fears are being expressed. The first is that Russia may be willing to risk even war in order to gain a quick advantage; the second, that while the Kremlin may not actually want war, the Soviets are liable to make some terrible mistake which will cause one in spite of them.

Great Britain

In Britain they are still talking about the Communist "purge"—for although the newspapers refrained from using so drastic a word, that is what it really amounts to. Prime Minister Atlee told the House of Commons that all Communists and "fellow-travellers" engaged in vital security work in the British civil service are to be either transferred—or sacked.

"I have not forgotten their attitude in 1939, 1940 and 1941," said Mr. Atlee, "and the workers of this country are well aware what the Communist party stands for."

Those affected by the purge will range all the way from telephone operators who have Communist boy friends to men like Professor Haldane, engaged in important naval research work but also on the Editorial Board of "The Daily Worker". Estimates of the number likely to lose their jobs, or be shifted to other ones, go as high as 10 thousand, but will probably be considerably less than that. Most of them will likely be among those connected with the Ministry of Supply, which deals with atomic and other top-secret weapons.

Sports – And One Thing or Another

By FRANK MANN HARRIS

("A Sixbit Critic")

Elmer Lach of the Montreal Canadiens won this year's high-scoring title, but his record seems just a tiny bit tainted because of his having been credited with three assists in the final game, these giving him just the margin needed to nose out his closest rival. This brings up, once again, the old problem as to whether or not it wouldn't be better to do away with assists altogether, and have goals only count in this matter of scoring awards.

* * *

Those in favor of the present system say that with assists done away with, players would show a tendency to "hog the puck" rather than pass it to a team-mate in a more favorable scoring position. The other side claims that friendly scorers—and all the scorers are "home-town" men, not travelling around as do the referees — can make a joke of the whole thing, giving assists to players who didn't do more than wave at the puck on its journey goalward.

* * *

Our own idea would be to allow no more than one assist per goal, that going to the last man who touched the puck before the actual scorer; and perhaps there would be something in the notion of crediting two points for a goal, one for the assist. Or possibly it would be better still to do away with these individual awards altogether — or to make them purely honorary, with no money attached. Hockey is getting so cluttered up with them that we more than half expect to see a trophy for the player getting the most requests for autographs over a season's play.

* * *

There have been many "long counts" in boxing, the most famous of all being the one in the Dempsey-Tunney affair at Chicago. For years Dempsey claimed that he got all the worst of that one, and that Tunney should have been counted out while outside the ropes. Actually, Jack had no one to blame but himself, the referee on that occasion very properly refusing to start the count till Dempsey had retired to a corner, instead of standing at the edge of the ring eager to take a crack at Gene as soon as he appeared.

* * *

Whether or not Tunney would have been able to scramble back in time—if Dempsey hadn't blown his top—is still a matter of hot debate in fistic circles, and something which can never be definitely settled, not that it matters much. Our own guess, for what it is worth, is that Gene could have made it, and would have won anyway. Anyway, Tunney is the man they finally paid off on, which is the most important thing.

* * *

But now the boys are talking about what seems to have been the long count to end all long counts. It came during the Madison Square Garden fight between Marcel Cerdan, the French middleweight, and Lavern Roach of Texas. In the second round, according to ringsiders, Mr. Roach was down on the canvas long enough for two or three counts to be tolled off, one estimate of the time being as high as thirty-two seconds, and even the smallest estimate running as high as sixteen. Cerdan finally managed to stop Roach for keeps in the eighth—but in the intervening six rounds the Frenchman must have been thinking to himself, "In America Time marches on — but slowly."

* * *

For a while, after Jack Kramer and Bobby Riggs started out on their professional tennis marathon, it appeared almost as if the boys were playing with one eye on the ball and the other on the box-office. One night Riggs would win; the next, lanky Kramer would knot it up; and so it went until there was considerable gossip that they had been taking a leaf out of the wrestling book, and never forgetting the necessity of making a return bout seem called for.
