
Province Protects Motorists' Tires—The self-described vehicle above spends the summer cruising Ontario's major highways, removing the metal flotsam that often plays hob with motor car tires. Consisting of two electro-magnets, powered by a motor in the body of the truck, the swinging beams at the rear pick up everything from nails to scythe blades. Driver's biggest problem is stopping to answer questions of curious U.S. tourists.

Sports – And One Thing or Another

By FRANK MANN HARRIS

("A Sixbit Critic")

In the course of a fanning session with a great former athlete the other day, the matter of color in sports—skin color, that is—happened to come up. "We used to draw the line because of personal prejudice and the idea that we whites are naturally a superior race," he said with a doleful shake of the head. "Now it begins to look as if we'll have to draw it all over again, simply because those colored boys are getting too good for us."

* * *

We had just been reading the news that, out in Lawrence, Kansas, two long-standing world records—the 120 yard high hurdles and the shot putt—had just been shattered, both by colored athletes.

* * *

The one notable—almost glaring—exception is the sport of hockey, where the colored boys just don't seem able to climb up to the upper branches with any degree of success. Of course this is probably because of lack of natural aptitude for "the world's fastest sport".

* * *

Long-standing timidity of big league baseball magnates to include negroes in their lineups—include them frankly as negroes, we mean—was due principally to their fear of unfavorable reaction in the more southerly cities of those loops. Brooklyn's experience last year with Jackie Robinson did a lot to kill that fear; and what happened during Dodgers' recent Spring training jaunt should just about finish the job.

* * *

With both Robinson and Roy Campanells as advertised attractions, The Bums played seven exhibitions in Asheville, Dallas, Fort Worth, Oklahoma City and Tulsa—all cities that had never before seen negroes competing with whites on a ball field, and all places where race feeling is supposed to run fairly high. And although the reception the two colored boys received from the "white "rooting sections was nothing to rave about, in baseball actions speak louder than words; and the record-breaking 63 thousand customers who paid to see those games will probably do more to convince the moguls than all the talk about "freedom and equality" ever spouted since the days of Abraham Lincoln.

* * *

This being the time of year when all sports writers peek into the tea-leaves and call the pennant-winners, why should we try and fracture such a long-established custom? It has the advantage of filling a certain amount of space in a fairly dull period of sport; and if we call them wrong, nobody will remember who we picked anyway. Naturally, if by some miracle we happen to pick them right, we can always remind you of the fact when Autumn rolls around.

* * *

Anyway, for no particular reason, we don't believe that either the Brooklyn Dodgers or the New York Yankees will be back with an encore of their last season's performance. In fact we wouldn't be too greatly surprised to see the next World Series an all-Boston affair—with the Braves and the Red Sox fighting it not for all the glory and mighty little dough, seeing that Beantown seating capacity is much below that of places like the Yankee Stadium.

* * *

There have been many remarkable performers in sport; but one of the most remarkable of all time is a party most of us hardly ever hear about. When a man who was old enough to be a machine-gunner in World War One is still sufficiently good to defend, with ease, his championship title in one of the toughest and most exacting of all games, he must be a wonder indeed. That man is a little Basque gentleman named Pierre Etchebaster, and the game is the ancient and regal sport known as court tennis.

* * *

One expert describes it as "the absolute of games" — one which calls for stamina, courage and daring, for the alertness of chess, the skill of billiards, the generalship of polo and the speed of hockey. It's played indoors on a court 110 X 38 feet. The net, in center, is 5 feet high at the ends, sloping to 8 feet at the middle. The court is cluttered up with "hazards" quite foreign to lawn tennis; and the ball is made from strips of cloth wound so tightly together that many players have been stunned by a fast rebound coming off the walls and connecting with the noggin.

* * *

Because of the cost of the courts, it's a wealthy man's game; and because of lack of room for many spectators, comparatively few ever see it played. But it's no game for a weakling, as anybody who has ever tried it will attest. And for a man like Etchebaster—at the age of 54—still to be without a rival in a game he's ruled for more than 20 years, stamps him as one of the marvels of sport. Just the other day he turned back the challenger and amateur title-holder, Ogden Phipps, seven sets to two; and he did it with such ease that now they're saying the only person with a chance of catching up with Pierre is an old party carrying a scythe, sometimes known as "The Grim Reaper".

Mother Earth Puts on Weight

The earth is either putting on weight, or else packs a whole lot more poundage than anybody ever suspected.

Take a deep breath and we'll give you the latest and most exact figures. It's 6,620 trillion tons. Or if you'd rather have it all in figures, just write down 6,620 and then start making zeros. There should be eighteen of them, after the 6,620, when you're done.

That's right—6,620,000,000,000,000,000,000 tons. No wonder the old lady seems to be rather weary at times!

For centuries scientists have been trying to establish the exact weight of the earth. In 1793 Lord Cavendish made the first determination and devised the method, which with many modifications, was used in the latest tests made at Washington by the Bureau of Standards. But the newest method is a great improvement even over the one used at the last test, in 1930; and as a result there has been a large correction in the figure of this globe's weight—hundreds upon hundreds of millions of pounds being added to the estimates.

These experiments have not been carried on just out of idle curiosity, either. Actually, this information is immensely important in many fields of scientific work—to astronomers, astro-physicists, just plain physicists as well as many others engaged in basic research.

That's Different

A French valet, violently opposed to capitalism, spent most of his spare time attending Communist meetings. His employer didn't approve but was tolerant, for the man was an unusually efficient servant. But then the valet suddenly stopped going to the meetings. Asked for an explanation, he said: "At the last meeting I attended it was proved that if all the wealth in the country were divided equally the share of each person would be 2000 francs."

"So what?" asked his employer.

"Well," replied the valet, "I have 5000 frances."
