Sports - And One Thing or Another

By Frank Mann Harris

When he steered Citation under the wire, three and a half lengths ahead of his stablemate Coaltown, Eddie Arcaro became the first jockey to be aboard a Kentucky Derby winner four times. And right after the weighing-in rites had been performed Arcaro remarked, somewhat wryly, "Well, that's one time I picked the right one."

* * *

He was thinking, no doubt, of some of his previous Derby experiences—of the horses he had thought were a cinch that failed to come through, and of the ones he didn't feel had a chance which won. For crack jockeys can pick ultimate losers that look like certain winners, even as you and I.

Arcaro's first Derby mount was Nellie Flag, back in 1945. Everybody had Nellie pegged as the greatest filly since Regret—the only one of her sex ever to win the great Julep Belt event. But Eddie discovered—as have many others before and since—that fillies are a risky proposition early in the year, and Nellie Flag finished up with three others in front of her.

* * *

His next mount, three years later, was Lawrin—and if Arcaro had had his own way, he'd have missed the thrill of forking his first Derby winner. "I want no part of that one," he told Ben Jones, the trainer, when asked to ride, "I've got no confidence in him." But Jones persuaded the jockey that Lawrin had one burst of speed that was bound to take him to the front. Rounding the bend for home Arcaro turned that burst loose; and that was that.

* * *

Eddie confesses that he was also dubious regarding Whirlaway's chances, in 1941. He didn't like the way Whirlaway had been beaten in the Blue Grass Stakes and in the Derby Trial; and he knew that the horse had crazy habits and was just as liable to climb the fence into the infield as not. One of Arcaro's great regrets is that he didn't take a little of the 10 to 1 somebody offered him against the horse—as all Whirlaway won by was a mere eight lengths.

In the 1942 renewal Eddie had his pick of two mounts—and grabbed the wrong one. They were Shut Out and Devil River. Arcaro's choice was Devil River; and although, two days before the race, when he breezed both horses, Shut Out felt and worked better, he refused to switch, and stuck to his original choice. Shut Out was the winner.

* * *

Although his mount in the 1944 Derby was the favorite, and there wasn't much to beat, Eddie had his doubts as to the horse's ability to last the mile and a quarter distance. He was right. Stir Up failed to go the route and Pensive won Next year he was in the saddle on Hoop Jr. and didn't have to work any harder than he did this month on Citation. Hoop Jr, bust off in front and never had even a glimpse of another horse until they were pulling up after the finish.

* * *

Lord Boswell was his mount in 1946—a horse that everybody thought would come from behind with terrific speed, mowing down all contenders in the stretch run. But it was a big field, hard to get through, and the chances are that Lord Boswell wasn't all the horse the experts said he was. Anyway, he didn't make it.

* * *

Arcaro still thinks and maintains that he gave Phalanx, the 1947 favorite, as good a ride as possible; although there were a whole heap of onlookers who don't agree, and say that Eddie was distinctly outridden. That race still troubles his dreams, and he's studied the movies dozens of times looking for, and failing to find, any mistakes he made.

"Phalanx was a slow horse to pick up speed so I didn't hurry him away from the gate," Eddie says. "Starting with the backstretch I thought we should be passing some of the ones in front When I saw that we weren't I hit Phalanx at the five-eighths pole. From the stands it might have looked as if we were flying then, but I'm still not convinced that we were Even at the head of the stretch we were unable to gain on Jet Pilot; and the only reason we gained on him on end was because he was coming back to us. I couldn't have given him a better ride'"

Just For Fun

A cub reporter on an English newspaper was reprimanded for going too much into detail. "Keep it brief," ordered the editor. The next day he found the following on his desk:

"Shooting tragedy last night. Lord Hapless, a guest at Lady Wistful's, complained of feeling ill, took a highball, his hat and coat, no notice of anyone, his departure, a taxi, a pistol from his pocket, and his life. Good chap. Regrets."

"Canning" Help for the Cancer Fight—Like all others who realize the importance of combatting this great killer, railway workers throughout the Dominion are helping the "Fight Cancer" Fund. A novel plan has been adopted by railway freight department employees; and pictured here is one of two jam tins which will travel across Canada and back for contributions, just before it left Vancouver aboard the C.P.R.'s fast freight "Seaboard" on its way to Halifax and intermediate points. A similar can will travel over the lines of the Canadian National Railroad. The idea originated at Vernon, B.C., and the two "tins with silver linings" will finally be returned to that point for delivery to Cancer Fund authorities.

What Goes On In The World

By Norman Blair

Western Europe

In March the Foreign Ministers of Britain, France, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg put their signatures to a treaty of mutual defense. That was the start of the European Western Union; and on the same day the treaty was signed, President Truman pledged the United States to give the Union assistance, in the time of need, "by appropriate means".

Now a joint general staff has been established among the five nations; and in an effort to let the United States know just how much assistance would be needed, have made an estimate of what the strength of the Western Union Nations would be in terms of manpower.

	Army	Navy	Air Force
Britain	527,000	307,000	147,000
France	465,000	58,000	72,000
Holland	110,000	38,000	7,000
Belgium	58,000	none	7,000

Australia

With so much talk about rising prices and the advisability of reimposing price controls in Canada, it may be of interest to know a little of what goes on "Down Under"

The most recent available reports say that price controls still apply to goods sold within Australia; and while the Price Commissioner has authorized certain advances, on the whole the level has been pretty well maintained.

A review of etail prices in six Australian state capitals showed that the index for the three months ending last September—with the 1936-1939 average taken as equal to 100 — were as follows; Food and groceries, 126; Rent of small houses, 106; Clothing, 191; Miscellaneous goods and services, 126.

Wholesale price of basic materials and foodstuffs have also risen to some extent, although not nearly as much as on this Continent. The wholesale index for November 1947 —compared on the same basis as above — was 139 for coals and metal; 158 for oils, fats and waxes; 281 for textiles; 143 for chemicals; 130 for hides and rubber; 189 for building materials; 150 for foodstuffs and tobacco.

It is interesting to note that the index for goods principally imported into Australia was 195, while that for goods principally produced at home was only 139. As at the end of 1947 consumer rationing still continued to apply to meat, tea, butter, clothing and gasoline.

The United States

Of special interest to many Canadians is the victory scored at Washington for the pro-margarine forces. In New York, for instance, margarine is selling at 45 cents a pound, against butter price of more than double that. Dairy interests have long contended that present restrictive laws and taxes must continue, fearing that unrestricted margarine may eventually mean — literally — the end of their bread and butter. But in spite of bitter opposition the House of Represenatives voted by over two to one to repeal the Federal tax. However, rougher sledding is expected in the Senate, where the smaller dairying states carry just as much weight as those having big city populations.

Palestine

Affairs in that much-troubled land continue to remain in a condition of chaos, and there are many who regard the Arab threat of invasion, with the purpose of taking the whole country, a very real one.

The one man who may hold the key to the whole Palestine situation is Abdullah Ibn El-Hussien, king of the mountainous little country of Trans-Jordan. For although Abdullah's country is small (population only 335,000) and was recognized as a sovereign, independent kingdom only two years ago, his Arab Legion is by far the trongest Arab army in the Middle East, and what he says carries the utmost weight in the seven-state Arab league.

The Legion has 15,000 trained and disciplined fighters, who have tanks, mobile artillery and other modern mechanized equipment. The top-ranking officers are British, the Legion commander being John Bagot Glubb Pasha. And very close ties are said to exist between Abdullah and the British Foreign Office.

Great Britain

In April, for the fourth successive month, Britain's steel industry broke its own production record. The successful drive for more scrap iron was apparently a contributing factor, which has carried steel production far beyond the goal set by the Government.

Production last month was at an annual rate of over 15 million tons, whereas the year's target was only 14 million tons. Pig iron production also rose in April, with the industry evidently feeling the benefit of new blast furnaces.
