Rundown Properties And Their Assesment Value

In the past, speaking of assessments, it has been the custom in town and in country, to allow lower assessments on homes and lands which were in a poor or rundown state and to up the assessments on properties which were being improved and taken care of in what is considered a progressive way. The fact of the matter is, that under the present system of land and property taxation the ne'er-do-well and his properties and the careless or lazy are being bonussed, while the industrious and prideful citizen is being soaked. Looking over Western Ontario it seems time now for assesors and municipal officials to make a change in such things as values on properties.

For the good of the country, the present procedure should be reversed and those who show initiative and have pride in their homes and farms should be assured of a more or less equitable assessment while those backward citizens who allow their properties through neglect or design to run down and the soil to deteriorate, should have their levies increased. This may sound a little rough on the so-called poor resident, but circumstances could be taken into account in certain border-line cases and in this way there would be an incentive to improve all lands and buildings everywhere. This idea is now being tried out by the Labour Government on British farms and it is said to have resulted in a great improvement in farm conditions and yield. — St. Marys Journal-Argus.
