"Before engaging rooms in your house," said the bachelor, "I want to know if there are any families with crying babies staying here."

"I'm afraid there is," replied the landlady, "but we——"

"Well, I was just going to say," continued the other, "that if there are, I want you to put me in the room next to theirs. I want to wake up in the night and hear their trouble, so that I can congratulate myself again that I'm not married."

Hello Homemakers! Resolutions made? It is not too late. Do not make them too difficult or you'll break them too easily, and so, subtely lose confidence in your will power and integrity. Let your resolutions have some bearing on your everyday life.

Since many homemakers agree that they would keep resolutions if they only had the TIME, you will probably agree that interruption, not procrastination, is the thief of time. Interruptions are upsetting for numerous reasons. Maybe if you understand why, you will be calmer.

1. Unpreparedness. You begin every household task with a mistaken idea (although it may be subconscious) that you will be permitted to complete it in uninterrupted bliss. Consequently you are unprepared for time-out.
2. Frustration. Your thoughts which direct your actions, move in a stream of consciousness. It's like water flowing downhill — once the stream is started, it doesn't want to stop. Consequently, you feel frustrated if stopped suddenly.
3. Anger. This is a natural human reaction. The adrenal glands pour adrenalin into the system, which upsets the balance of the entire body when one is angry.
4. Confusion. You feel confused because you are temporarily "unbalanced." That's why you put sugar in your cake twice and cut one trouser leg too short.

HOW WE CAN COMBAT DISORGANIZATION

1. Change your attitude. Accept the possibility of interruptions as a normal part of your housewife's job, as being called out in the middle of the night is part of a doctor's job, or walking in the rain, part of a postman's job.

2. Start your day right. Say to yourself "I'll remain calm today, no matter how maddening the interruptions are."

3. Plan your day's work to allow ten or more minutes for interruptions in each hour's work.

4. Don't get angry. It's not the interruption that does the damage, it's your anger. So, encourage the cheerful habit.

5. Put your unconscious mind to work. Relax when you can and then do things calmly.

THE QUESTION BOX

Mrs. C. W. asks: How to keep fruit from sinking in a cake

Answer: The washed raisins and currants should be drained, patted dry with a towel and tossed with one-third of the measured flour from the recipe.

Mrs. J. R. asks: Why did my candy become sugary when test showed soft-ball stage.

Anwer: Wrap a damp cloth around the tines of a fork and wipe down the sides of the kettle to preven any sugar crystals from going bac into the syrup.

Miss M. K. asks: Why did butterscotch candy not harden when we boiled the mixture slowly over direct heat.

Answer: First, do not allow sugar mixture to boil until sugar is all dissolved. Secondly, a steady boil — not a simmer — is necessary to thicken candy mixtures.

Miss J. S. asks: Can you suggest ways of using home canned peaches that have turned dark at the top of the jar.

Answer: Use in upside down cake mashed in a fruit filling for a layer cake or pureed with apple sauce or with prunes.

The Speeding Up Of Rural Mail Is Needed

"The Printed Word" is the name of a pamphlet published monthly by Messrs. Johnton, Everson & Charlesworth, who we judge to be experts in the field of public relations. Their stuff is well worth reading, and never worthier than in their most recent issue, when they take up the matter of Canada's recent change in air delivery, whereby a letter may be sent between the various cities of Canada for four cents.

Briefly, they point out that if the government has money to throw around by providing a service for all, which is desired and needed by only a few, they might well toss a few pennies forward providing speedier delivery to the smaller centres, and start paying a decent rate for rural mail carriers.

A letter comes to Toronto from Vancouver in about 14 hours, it is stated, then takes 48 hours to get out to a rural route around 80 miles out of Toronto. City newspapers can reach the small towns in a few hours —the mail takes a day or more. Air mail at four cents will not pay a profit, the article states, and suggests the government is interested in simply trying to make the Trans-Canada Airlines a paying proposition.

There are a few of us who use air mail, and still fewer to whom the difference between the former seven-cent rate and the present four-cent matters a tinker's cuss There are many undreds of thousands of us, however, who would stand up and cheer if the government awakened to the use of modern road transport for the speeding up of mail to small towns and rural areas.

The Courier has had its own troubles in this connection, so while we can't help feeling dreadfully joyous that some people in Vancouver are hearing from Aunt Susan in Toronto in 14 hours, we wouldn't feel too badly if the post office department were authorized to purchase some light delivery vans and sent one to each town serving a large rural area. Maybe it wouldn't keep the Trans-Canada Airlines in competition with private business in general a chance to conduct its affair more promptly. There are so man people who do not live in Toronto and Vancouver. — Perth Courier.

BRITAIN'S CONTRIBUTION TO WORLD NAVIGATION

An exhibition was recently opened in London, England, illustrating the progress of the art of navigation through the ages. Performing the opening ceremony, the Duke of Edinburgh said that it was entirely appropriate that it should be held in Britain, which has contributed nearly all the notable advances in navigational science. The first completely nautical almanac emanated in Britain, as did the first sextant and the first marine chronometer. The exhibits also include the earliest known optical instrument in the world, as well as many other historically interesting telescopes. The revolutionary development of the last decade are well illustrated. These include radar, echo sounders radio direction finders and an electric eye that can pierce the densest fog.

Doucett Urges Safe Driving As Resolution For Motorists

Ontario's 1,200,000 drivers are urged by the Hon. George Doucett, Minister of Highways, to make this their New Year's resolution:

"I will drive with care and consideration for others."

"The basic cause of most accidents," Mr. Doucett states, "is just that lack of care and consideration for others."

Reviewing the traffic accident record in 1948, Mr, Doucett points out that Ontario has been making good progress in traffic safety:

"On the basis of gasoline used in the province, the death rate from accidents in 1948 was lower than for any previous year. Despite a huge increase in traffic, the death losses for the 11-month period to the end of November were 676 deaths this year, compared with 667 in 1947 and 717 in 1941.

"But as I have said before, no improvement in traffic losses is good enough. The terrible toll of lives and personal injuries, the broken homes, misery and tragedy is far higher than it used to be. In the New Year, I hope that every driver in the province and every pedestrian will join in Ontario's safety program.

"The full support and co-operation of all citizens — motorists and pedestrians alike — is needed. At this time, in the presence of the many hazards peculiar to winter. I would like to add my support to the efforts being carried on by the police and other organizations to make 1949 a safe, as well as a happy New Year."

CREAM

There is still a tremendous demand for butter and prices are good, and likely to stay that way. So, by a little extra care in the feeding of the herd, production can be stepped up, and by so doing, receive larger profits from the herd, and especially if you market your cream at the Flesherton Creamery, where you are guaranteed all that is in your cream. Bring in your eggs with the cream.

We are still in the market for fowl and chickens, alive or dressed, and will pay top market prices.
