St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Held Anniversary

Horses vs Tractors

The ever-increasing performance and efficiency of the tractor during the first part of this century does not mean that in the near future the horse will have disappeared as a factor of importance in world agriculture, says an editorial of "World Crops," a magazine printed in Great Britain and distributed throughout the world.

According to this article, there is no reason to believe, as some prophets do, that the horse "will survive merely as an instrument for sport and recreation, a charming relic of a bygone age." On the contrary, the editorialist writes, the horse has, and will continue to have, a definite part to play in the farm economy for many years to come and, indeed, indefinitely. It will supplement the work of the machine an dtheir roles are complementary, a sort of symbosis, in fact.

Point is given to this in a recent circular of the British Ministry of Agriculture which describes the alarming decline in the number of farm horess during the past decade. The circular stresses the fact that tractors have to depend on imported fuel oil, while the horse "proceeds under its own steam generated by home-grown food."

"Even assuming that adequate supplies of tractors, spare parts and fuel can be relied upon," says the writer in "World Crops," "there are still many occasions when the horse can be more suitably employed than the tractor. Smaller farms with, say 100 to 125 acres of arable land, possessing only one tractor, will almost certainly require two horses at least.'

The editorial goes on to point out that the tractor is particularly valuable for getting heavy work done quickly, but numerous light jobs are more cheaply and efficiently done by horses, especially when conditions are wet, owing to the lower compressive effect of the horse. In some conditions, "the source of the draft animal is a source of organic manure, has to be taken into account."

"It is not really a question of competition between the animal and the tractor," concludes the editorialist, "but rather one of deciding the conditions under which each can be used to the best advantage. They are, in fact, complementary and not competitive."

Newlyweds should start with a small home, says a woman's page writer. So there won't be much room for argument?

Junior Baseball Team Playing Good Ball

Shallow Lake gave Flesherton junior baseball team a drubbing on Friday evening, when they romped home with a 12-3 win. Shallow Lake had previously won the game played here in a close 3-2 contest.

Tuesday of this week Flesherton gave Durham their second loss of the season when they won 6-3 in a real good game. Falconer had one of his good nights and struck out 13 Durham players, five in the last two innings. They play a postponed fixture in Durham this Saturday night.

Flesherton—Dave McGee c., Phil. McMullen 1b., J. Banks 3b., Bruce Boettger ss., Don Smith 2b., Harold Nichol lf., Bob Falconer p., Milford Loucks rf., Leslie Johnson cf.

The boys are playing pleasing ball and a good crowd attended the game Tuesday night, which was their last home game until the play-offs, if they reach them.

The senior club has folded up after two losses last week, due to the lack of a pitcher and a couple of players who will play regularly. The same players are in the team in the Sullivan softball league and some of the players could not spend the time necessary to play in the two leagues.

CHATSWORTH HERE TONIGHT

Chatsworth senior softball team is to play in Flesherton this Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clcok. This should be a real good game.

IN MEMORIAM

SIMMONS — In ever- loving memory of my dear Father and Mother, Walter Robert Simmons and Sarah Simmons, who passed away July 29th, 1925, and June 22, 1945, respectively

Hark, we hear the Master calling
One by one crossing o'er the tide,
There to greet familiar faces
Anchored safe on Jordon's side.

And though shadows often deepen,
The sunset hour they cannot mar;
For those loved ones they'll be waiting —
Watching when I cross the bar.

— Daughter, Flossie.

HAXTON — In loving memory of our mother, Janet Cowan Haxton, who departed this life July 7th, 1949.

In memory a dainly thought,
In heart a secret sorrow.
