Miss Edith MacLeod, of Beamsville, is the guest of friends in this locality at present.

Miss Dell I. Rae holidayed with her cousin, Mrs. M. Kinney, of Artemesia last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Wiley visited with Meaford friends last week. Misses Velma and Margaret returned with them after spending their holidays there.

Mr. Crampton, sr., and Miss Jennings, of Kemble, visited Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Lyons last week.

Miss Bella Bassett of Owen Sound, holidayed with Mr. and Mrs. Will Basset recently.

Misses Laura Acheson and Ida Carbert returned to the city last week.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Lyons and children returned to their home at Halbrite, Sask., after a six months' visit with friends in this vicinity.

Pleased to report Mr. Wes Lyons almost recovered from a severe attack of appendecitis.

Miss Allan, of Durham, was the guest of friends in this locality during the past week.

Within the next few weeks the officers of the Salvation Army who are stationed at Feversham, will be calling on the people of this vicinity for assistance with the S. A.'s annual Harvest Festival Effort. This Effort is one with which many no doubt are acquainted. The proceeds are used to make possible the work the Army is doing all over the country. The Officers Assistance Fund, the Pension Fund, and the Fund for Assisting Struggling Corps are all dependant upon these Harvest Festival Efforts for their existence. The Officers' Assistance Fund helps to make up the salary of the Officers, etc. The necessity of the Pension Fund arises out of the fact that the salary of the S. A. Officer is never more than enough to keep him supplied with the necessaries of life as he goes along. As a consequence it will be easily seen that circumstances will sometimes arise where an old and trusted officer whose health has failed should be given a little in the line of a pension. The latter fund for assisting Struggling Corps helps us with the building undertakings and repairs or sometimes rent. We believe the cause in every way a worthy one. Captain Howes and Lieut. Battersby, officers in charge of Feversham Corps.

My wife is having the best of health. Miller's Compound Iron Pills did it. Sold by W. Turner & Co.

The Lure of the Mask

By HAROLD MAC GRATH

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

CHAPTER IV (Cont'd.)

Every man has some portion of self love. So his next effort was a passionate denial that he was "nice." When should he meet her? The postman brought him a letter which contained one word—Nimmer! He sent her four pages, a frank and witty description of himself and his friends.

On the day she received this letter a cablegram came to her from the far Mediterranean. Whatever it contained had the effect to cause all restraint to disappear from the tone of her letters. They became charming, and more and more Hillard found himself loving a voice. All his watching, all his traps, came to no successful end. She was too clever for him. He sought the mail department of the great newspaper; the clerk couldn't remember, there were so many calling for mail. Letters passed to and fro daily now, but always she declared that it was impossible for them to meet. No, it was out of the question to dine with him in a restaurant. It was equally out of the question to cook a dinner where she lived, as she and her maid dined at a small restaurant near by. Finally he proposed to bring the dinner all cooked from the club. Two days went by without a sign; then the blue letter came.

I surrender. The most fatal thing in life is curiosity. It has the power to lead us into all manner of trouble. And I have my share of curiosity. Remember, you never would have found me. I may dwell in a garret; I may be hideous; perhaps nothing remains to me but my voice. And now the terms. And if you do not follow them confidently and blindly your dinner will grow cold in the carriage. Dinner will be at 8, Feb. 1. At 7 a carriage will call for you. The messenger will blindfold you. He will then proceed to the club and take the dinner and bring you here. Be warned! If you so much as lift the corner of the bandage, the romance will end then and there. I realize that I am doing something very foolish and unwise; but, as you say, I am a woman who has seen much of the world. Thus I have my worldly side. I shall use it as a buffer.

"Blindfolded!" Hillard scrubbed his chin. All these precautions! Who was she? What was she? Since there was no escape, blindfolded he would go.

At half after 6 on the night of the 1st of February, then, he began to dress. It was some time since he had taken such particular care.

"The signor seems in high spirits tonight," observed Giovanni as he laid out the linen.

"Man, I'm happy and greatly excited. Do you recollect the lady who sang under my window? I am going to meet her tonight. The mystery will be a mystery no longer."

"Ah!" Giovanni stroked his lips doubtfully. "It is not like the signor to plunge blindly into adventures like this."

"The very word, blindly. I go blindfolded, amico. What do you think of that?"

"Blindfolded?" Giovanni was horrified. "It is a trap!" he cried. "They will assassinate you! No; you shall not go! In Rome, at the carnivals, it is an old game. They will rob you."

"Take the number of the cab as I get in. If anything should happen, give the number to the police."

Giovanni, with a sharp movement of the hands, expressed his resignation to the worst. He knew the futility of arguing with his master. But he followed him down to the hall and tied on the bandage himself. He was honest about it, too, for Hillard could see nothing. Then the messenger boy took him by the hand and led him to the carriage. As the two were climbing in Giovanni spoke rapidly in his native tongue.

"There is no number on the carriage!"

"Too late to bother now."

The carriage rolled off toward the club, where the dinner, hot and smoking, was taken on.

CHAPTER V.

THE MASK.

"JOININ' th' Elks?" asked the boy when Hillard was well under way once more.

"No; it's a seance. They are going to call up my fate round a table."

"Ugh! Aw, go-wan! Dey don't call up no ghosts wit' French cider and hot boids." The boy relapsed into silence.

By and by the carriage stopped.

"Dis is where we alights, me lord!" the boy jeered.

Hillard found the carriage steps and landed safely. He stood for a moment, listening. They were in a quiet part of the city; no elevated or surface cars were near. He was assured that the location was exclusive. Garrets are not to be found in quiet places.

"Look out fer th' steps," said the boy, again taking Hillard by the hand.

"And you be careful of that basket."

"I ain't lettin' it drop any."

Winding steps, thought the blindfolded man. He could recollect none. It seemed to him that they stood there five minutes before the door opened. When it did, the boy passed in the basket and resolutely pushed Hillard into the hall. The door closed gently, and the adventure was begun. Whither would it lead him?

"Take off the bandage the signor may now," said a voice in broken English.

"Thanks!" He tore the handkerchief from his eyes and blinked. The hall was so dimly lighted that he could see nothing distinctly.

"The signor's coat and hat."

He passed over these articles, shook the wrinkles from his trousers, smoothed his chin and stood at attention. The maid eyed him with abundant approval, then knocked timidly on the door leading to the drawing room.

She was masked!

"Avanti!" called a soft voice.

Hillard gathered in his courage, opened the door and stepped inside. On a divan near a lamp sat a woman in black. Only a patch of white throat could be seen, for her shoulders were not bare and her arms only to the elbows. Her back was turned squarely. But what a head! He caught his breath. It glowed like a copper beech in the sunshine.

"Madam?" he faltered. He spoke English and not very firmly.

The woman turned. Hillard took a step backward and blundered against a pedestal.

She was masked!

Masked! Only her mouth and chin were visible, and several little pieces of court plaster effectually disguised these. There was a mystery. He to come blindfolded and she to wear a mask—extraordinary!

"And this," she said ironically, "is the gentleman who leaned out of the window."

(To be Continued.)

SHELBURNE

(Too late for last week.)

Rev. C. O. Johnston, who is supplying in the Methodist church in the absence of Rev. W. A. Potter, in this town, happened with a nasty accident. He was visiting some friends near Laurel. He took out an old gun to shoot a ground hog, when the gun burst, nearly breaking his arm and putting considerable powder into his face. Dr. Thompson attended to his wounds and he is doing nicely, although it will be some time before he will have the use of his arm.

On Monday a team, belonging to the Watt Milling & Feed Co., ran away from their mill near the station and on running down Main st. ran into Dr. Thompson's auto, which happened to be standing in front of his office, damaging it so it will not run for a few days.

Word was received Tuesday morning of the death of Mr. Thos. Reaburne, of this place. Mr. and Mrs. Reaburne went out to British Columbia a few weeks ago to visit friends. After arriving there he was taken sick and died on Monday evening. The deceased was Division Court Clerk and has lived in Shelburne for a number of years. He leaves wife, three sons and two daughters to mourn his loss. His remains will be brought home for burial.

A very severe thunder storm passed both north abd south of this place on Monday doing considerable damage. The worst part of the storm seemed to pass over about Laurel. Great quantities of hail fell to such an extent that a few of the farmers have lost their entire crop.

The lightning killed two valuable cows belonging to Wm. Halbert, near Primrose, on Monday afternoon.

Mr. Robt Smith, about four miles west of this place, had his barn completely demolished with the storm on Monday.
