A WEEKLY THOUGHT.

There are two distinct classes of selfish people in the world to day. The first class is perhaps the more familiar to us, for it is composed of those people who are determined to have what they desire, no matter at what cost—caring not who may be pushed aside in their efforts to get a little more or be a little better than somebody else. But there is another class—those who are perhaps the more selfish, though they constantly pride themselves on their unselfishness. They are the people who are always giving up something for somebody else in a way that makes everybody around them feel that they are making a painful sacrifice. For instance, a lady of this class in a room where chairs were few and ladies many would not be seated if Mrs. —— had to stand; but would insist on Mrs. —— taking her chair while she stood with an air of having suffered a great deal to make another being comfortable, and making all the other seated occupants of the room vastly uncomfortable. Is not this purely selfishness, and do not many belong to this class? Do we belong to either class? If we do, let us begin to-day to cure ourselves and we shall be making all around us much happier.

A Faithful Equine.

Dear old "Maude" is dead. That famous and familiar driver, owned at one time by the late Mrs. Rodger Lever, but in recent years by her son, Thos., of this locality, passed away on Monday, August 12. She was in her 28th year and was almost as vigorous as in her earlier years. She was an ever faithful member of the family and will be missed greatly by the children, who considered her a valuable favorite. The Saturday preceding her death she was seized with indigestion, from which she never recovered. With the assistance of a few neighbors she was given a proper burial beneath the shade of a beautiful basswood tree near the barn. There are four of her descendants which includes three generations, still on the premises.—Toronto Line North cor. in Flesherton Advance.
