The Blue Serge Suit

There is no line of garments in the clothing trade which receives the same attention—both from customer and dealer—as the Indigo Blue Serge Suit. It is always in demand. Most men realize that they look their best in blue, and if it is a well tailored garment the dealer knows that he has made a satisfied customer.

To make a long story short, it gives absolute satisfaction to all concerned. For this season I am offering three lines of exceptional value in Indigo Blue Serge Suits at $12, $15, $18. Come in and see them.

Presentation.

The W.F.M.S. of Temple Hill met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. Smith on May 14th and presented Miss Elsie Smith, who is leaving soon to take up Mission Work at Ethelbert, Man., with a very nice Bible. The presentation was made by Mrs. Erskine, and the following address read by the President, Mrs. McCullough, of Rocklyn:

To Miss Elsie Smith;

Dear Miss Smith,—As you are about to leave the congregation of your childhood and launch out into a larger field of work for the Master, we, the members of the Auxiliary, desire to express to you our deep appreciation of your life in out midst and the choice you have made for your life work in the Master vineyard. We honour you as a fellow-worker in our congregation. We cannot separate you from your family, for we feel that you truly express the spirit of the family from which you sprung and that the spirit of Christian Charity has breathed through all the different members who have been co-laborers with us.

We feel that the work to which you are going is of the highest order. The Master whom we serve was the Great Physician and there can be no higher office than to minister to the sick and afflicted, bringing them the message of comfort and peace both to body and soul.

We feel as an Auxiliary that we are expressing not only our own feelings, but those of the whole congregation, and we hope that you may long be spared as an efficient worker in the Harvestfield of God.

We hope that you may come back to us from time to time to gladden the hearts of your parents and to enthuse us with the message of the work to higher efforts in the great missionary undertaking.

We beg that you will accept this Bible as a slight token of appreciation from the Temple Hill congregation and that you may realize that it carries with it the sincere regards of all our members.

Signed on behalf of the Auxiliary
Mrs. W. McCullough, Pres.
Miss J. Quinton, Secretary.

Henry Love Pays Extreme Penalty

Walked Unflinchingly from Cell to Gallows.—Retained Remarkable Nerve to the Last.

At thirteen minutes to 7 o'clock on Tuesday morning, in the dim and cold dawn and dampness of the grim old county jailyard, Charles Henry Love paid the penalty of taking the life of a fellow-creature. He went to his death without confession and with the iron nerve that has borne him up so marvellously since his arrest and first incarceration in Owen Sound jail. What may be construed as tantamount to a confession is contained in his statement written by himself and handed to Rev. H. S. Mullowney, his spiritual adviser, the day before that which was to be his last on earth, and which is appended below.

At the break of day there was a stir around the cold old courthouse and jail where the tragic scene was to be enacted—at what hour, exactly, no one knew. Befor five o'clock the black flag, the death flag, fluttered to the masthead on the jail, and streamed out in the chill north wind. This attracted the attention of knots of eager, curious and morbid people, who ebbed and flowed in front of the courthouse until after seven o'clock. Others had gained vantage places on nearby dwelling roofs and some even assayed to throw up a sort of a staging against the jail wall itself in the attempt to see over and catch a glimpse of the death of Love within the enclosure.

It is almost needless to say that the proper precautions were taken to have the police on the spot, and they drove away those whose curiosity had so emboldened them.

IN THE EARLY MORN.

At a few minutes to six Rev. H. S. Mullowney came to the jail and was at once admitted to the presence of the prisoner with whom he remained until the last grim scene was enacted. About six o'clock officials of the court began to arrive and also the doctors, policemen and press representatives. The minutes dragged along and when all who were to be there had arrived, Governor Miller, in whose efficient charge were many of the arrangements, announced that the doors of the jail were open, which was an intimation that the hour had come. This was about twenty-five minutes to seven o'clock. Prior to this Dr. T. H. Middlebro, the gaol surgeon had gone to the prisoner's cell and performed what routine examination the law requires.

THE DEATH MARCH.

Governor Miller, one of the guards, Chief McAuley, Sheriff Moore, Turnkey Wright and Rev. H. S. Mullowney were with Love when the cell door was thrown open, with a metallic clang. As they entered with set faces, Henry Love stood up and faced them fearlessly and with a face as set as their own.

At the word of Governor Miller Love stepped out of the cell, and turning to Jack Holmes, the hangman, Governor Miller said "Here's your man!" Holmes stepped briskly forward and grasping Love's hands drew them behind his back and taking a long thin strap from his pocket proceeded to draw it over the wrists and buckle it. As he tugged at the wristlet leather, Love with a suspicion of a frown said "Don't pull 'em too tight together, it hurts my chest."

Then came the inexpressibly repressive march to the scaffold. First came Rev. Mr. Mullowney and the jail officials, and following came the doomed man, on one side of him Chief McAuley, on the other County Constable George Fraser, of Bognor, each of them with a firm hand on the prisoner's shoulder.

As he strode out into the open and the sight of the green grass greeted his eyes and the twittering of numberless sweet songbirds in the nearby trees smote on his ears, Henry Love gave no sign of flinching. In him was an indomitable spirit, and as he walked out of the jail, through a narrow passage and then along the south wall to the scaffold, erected near the eastern extremity, he looked about with one level comprehensive glance. Then he cast his eyes toward the scaffold, and coming to the steps strode up sturdily. His face and general appearance was as composed as it had been throughout his trial. The hangman followed him up the steps and when Love stepped out on the fatal trapdoor he was unflinching.

HIS STATEMENT.

Asked if he had anything to say he did not respond and Rev. Mr. Mullowney said: "Henry Love has no statement to make, but has asked me to make this statement for him;" whereupon he read:

Statement of Charles Henry Love to be read on the scaffold and given to the press:—

"It is not likely that I shall say anything on the scaffold, but I want you, Mr. Mullowney, to tell the people for me, that I want them to take warning, that is when the spirit of God strikes within them, they should yield to God and not put off salvation to the eleventh hour like me, and not be like me with twenty-three years of wasted time serving the devil that should have been for God. Over twenty years ago God's spirit struck within me, but I refused to yield. Look at me now! But even at this late hour God has forgiven me and I die in peace. Yet I leave the world with this awful thought—my life was wasted. But He who has had mercy on my soul is willing and able to save you. Come to Him now! Read Isaiah 55: 6-7; John 6: 37; 1st John 1-9; Matt. 11-28 and Psalms 23-24.

(Signed) Charles Henry Love.

THE DEATH.

After the statement had been read, Rev. Mr. Mullowney prayed, and stepped aside as Hangman Holmes strode forward and tied a strap about the ankles. Then as he was affixing the black death-cap, Love asked for a drink but the cap cut off his utterance and in a moment the noose was affixed carefully. There was a moment when no one breathed as Holmes leaned over and sprung the lever. Love shot down an eight-foot drop, his neck instantly broken, and then swayed gently to and fro, with the head thrown back at a sickening angle and slightly to one side. For a few minutes he remained thus and then the doctors went in beneath the scaffold and feeling the pulse declared Love dead. The hangman came down and in a few minutes the rope was cut and the corpse slid down into Holmes' arms and was extended on a blanket laid underneath the scaffold. The straps, rope and cap were removed and the undertaker took charge of the body.

It was all over. Henry Love had paid with his life the extreme penalty imposed by the law for an inhuman and brutal crime.

THE HANGMAN.

Jack Holmes, the hangman, is a youth of about twenty to twenty-one years, tall and slightly built. His face is marked with a red rash on the chin and cheek and his level eyes are a steely gray, cold and dispassionate. His home is near Ottawa. He has officiated at hangings in Lethbridge and Manitoba and two or three in the Western States, so that he was no novice.

THE LAST HANGING.

On December 5th, 1884, only other hanging in Grey County, took place when Cook Teat, of Artemesia township, paid the extreme penalty for poisoning his wife. Teat was ten years older than Henry Love.

DISPOSITION OF BODY.

After being viewed by the coroner's jury this forenoon, Love's body was removed to Breckenridge's undertaking parlors where it was prepared for burial. The burial took place this forenoon in the Potter's Field.—O.S. Sun.

TRAVERSTON

(Special to The Standard.)

Six years ago to-day the ground was covered with snow.

Archie McArthur, of the 10th con., who has been in the employ of the Durham Furniture Co., is home to help at erecting the big brick house on the old homestead.

Bertie and Elgin Wright were down from Owen Sound for the holidays and enjoyed some rare fishing sport.

On Thursday of last week, to Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Timmins was born a little girl.

Mrs. Bert Summers and Master Jack returned to their home in Toronto on Saturday, after a fortnight's visit at her old home.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Frook, of Proton, drove over to the Blair homestead on Saturday and remained till next day.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Ryan and family spent the holiday at Mr. Will Jack's and got a fine string of fish.

Dr. F. R. and Mrs. Grant, of Durham, were guests of the Robson home on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. McFadden and baby, Evelyn, visited Mrs. McFadden's old home the first of the week.

Tom Cook sports a fine, new top buggy purchased in your town last week.

Mr. John McGechie, of Dunfries, came up on Saturday to visit his sister, Mrs. James Nelson, and his niece, bright, little Bessie, for whom the doctors hold out no hope, in fact, the end seems not far away.

Mrs. J. J. Peart received word last week that her sister, Mrs. Harry Metcalfe, of near Hanover, was very low. She went over on Thursday and word has come back that she passed away on Saturday. The funeral takes place this Tuesday. Mr. J. J. Peart and Mrs. Geo. Peart are attending the funeral. Mrs. Metcalfe was a woman possessing high moral virtues and homemaking gifts, and, until a few years ago, was gifted with robust health; but she contracted the White Plague some three years ago and despite every care and effort, it claimed another victim. Much sympathy is felt for Mrs. Peart over the loss of her only sister.

The sudden, tragic death of Mr. James Falkingham in Durham on Tuesday morn. of last week, by falling from his wagon and breaking his neck, came as a shock to this neighborhood, where he lived for over thirty-three years, being one of the very earliest pioneers of the township, coming in 63 years ago. For the past thirty years he has resided in Durham; but still retained ownership of his fine farm on the 6th con. He was born 85 years ago in Yorkshire, England, and to very few is given the bodily vigor and strength that he possessed, being able to do as much as the ordinary youth even up to the end. The funeral took place to Zion cemetery on Friday afternoon and a large concourse of old neighbors followed the casket to its last resting place. The members of the family surviving are: Will, John, James, Anna and Mary, of Minnesota; Mrs. Frank Grasby, of Manitoba, and Mrs. Wm. Paylor, on the homestead. Mr. Falkingham was a strong supporter of Zion in bygone years.

3 Months for Selling Whiskey

Selling whiskey in Owen Sound is a precarious business as Robert Allen found out on Wednesday in the Police Court when Magistrate Creasor imposed a fine on him of $100 and costs or three months in jail. F. Small was the only witness called and he swore that on Saturday night, May 10th, he procured two bottles of whiskey from Allen in Dr. Brown's office, paying $1.25 each for them. Allen, who pleaded not guilty, admitted that Small had been at Brown's office that night but swore he had not received any whiskey there. The Magistrate believed Small's story, however, and as Allen did not have the money, he will go to jail for three months.—O.S. Sun.
