These same potatoes were brought to town almost six weeks ago and because the farmer could not get $6 per bag he took them back home. Now they had been over the road for the second time with no hope of diposal other than being fed to the pigs. If he hadn't been a hog this farmer could have got $80 for these potatoes six weeks ago, but as he wanted nearly $100, he fooled himself.

HOW CHESLEY DOES.

Autos have become so plentiful in town and community that the council considered it necessary to pass a by-law regulating traic on Main Street. Motor vehicles must "slow up" and toot their horns at the street intersections. Autos and rigs must keep to the right on the streets and must not remain standing on Main Street more than 20 minutes. The fine imposed for breaking this regulation may be as low as one dollar or as high as fifty dollars.—Chesley Enterprise.
