Of one who is gone to rest,
And those who think of him to-day
Are those who loved him best.

SAVE AND BUY BOOKS

"Yes it must be very interesting," a young man said in an answer to his friend who had waxed very enthusiastic over a book he had just finished. "I should like to read it, but it's pretty near hopeless to get it out of the library and I can't afford to buy it." And yet in the course of the conversation he mentioned casually that after attending a movie the previous evening he and his companions had gone to one of the down-town restaurants and had supper.

It is said that the home library is doomed, that the public and the circulating libraries provide for the reader's needs, while the ordinary apartment lacks room for books. But there is no piece of furniture that takes up less room than a bookcase. It stands back against the wall in the most unobtrusive fashion. Its feelings are not hurt if it is relegated to the hall.

A book drawn from a public library and returned at the end of two weeks may have a strong influence upon the life, but that is not likely to be the case. What would the Bible mean to one who took it out of the library and read it in the next fortnight? What would Shakespeare mean to one who depended on the public library for his knowledge of Shakespeare? Our lives are influenced, molded, by the books that are always within reach, that we pick up, read for a few minutes, and then ponder.

A modern advertiser is using for his slogan, "Buy a book a week." That is more than some of us can do, more, indeed, than it is necessary for us to do. But a good many of us could buy a book a month, if we were willing to give up some little extravagance. The young man referred to earlier who thought he could not afford to buy a book, spent seventy-five cents for a late supper, which was not only unnecessary, but injurious.

C. P. R. detectives arrested Graham Losee, of Guelph Junction, last week, and locked him in Milton jail. For several months past freight cars at the Junction have been broken into and hundreds of dollars' worth of merchandise has been stolen. Armed with a search warrant the detectives recovered part of the stolen goods at Losee's house. The prisoner has been working for the C. P. R. for some time. The detectives state that other arrests may follow, as an organized gang of robbers has been raiding the country for a radius of about 50 miles, stealing horses and poultry, breaking into houses and freight cars and in many other ways causing no end of trouble to the farmers and others in this part of Ontario. Three other members of the organized gang, Cooper, Walker and Benton, also of Guelph Junction, will be sentenced at Hamilton on Wednesday morning for stealing poultry, to which charge they pleaded guilty last week. Losee came before Police Magistrate Dice at Milton on Monday for preliminary trial and was sent to jail to await trial at the assizes.

OLDEST OF INDUSTRIES

Perhaps the oldest of all industries is sheep raising, for it was practiced even before agriculture. Wool is the product of cultivation or domestication, for there are no wild animals which closely resemble the wool-bearing sheep. With the discovery that cloth could be made from wool came an effort to improve the fleece by selection and breeding. The early Romans were most successful in this pursuit, and their endeavors along this line resulted in developing a fleece of great fineness. After the conquest of the Iberian peninsula, Roman sheep were introduced into Spain, where they so greatly improved the native flocks that even during the Roman supremacy Spanish wool led the world's markets, a prestige held for centuries.
