With Gas Assured

Great Excitement Aroused Over Drilling Deeper Wells in Caledon Mountains

With most eminent authorities and experts in gas and oil predicting extraordinary possibilities for the Caledon Gas and probable oil fields at Inglewood, backing up these predictions by investments of their own, together with securing leasable rights around the Dover Oil Company's 900 acres, in the vicinity; with the sinking of deeper wells for a larger commercial supply of natural gas rapidly progressing; with the pipe line financed arranged for and franchises under negotiation, the excitement and interest, not only in the immediate vicinity of the wells, but in Orangeville, Brampton, Acton and Georgetown and intervening points, where immediate pipe lines are contemplated, is growing apace and those who formerly were dubious are awakening to the enormous possibilities at their very doors and are investing through the Securities Sales Service, Toronto, in Dover Oil Co. shares while still available at $1.00.

But larger financial interests, having at last got wind of these possibilities and having become interested, are angling for a big block of this attractive stock, believing that in these Caledon fields lies a fortune of immense proportions, that "the little fellows" do not properly appreciate.

Just 1,000 feet from No. 1 well at Inglewood, where a big supply (106,000 cubic feet daily) of sweet natural gas—the finest in Canada, say experts—now exists, is where the first of the deeper wells is now going down, the power for which drilling, is furnished from but a small portion of the No. 1 well supply, undoubted evidence of the existence of natural gas in paying quantities.

Hundreds of wells may be drilled in this natural basin, with seven or eight valleys leading into it and whose topographical formation leads all experts to state, that here will be found a large body of gas and oil. It is impossible to state what vast fortunes may underlie the 900 acres of this basin, controlled by the Dover Oil Company, Limited, for where gas exists there must be oil in the vicinity and oil in quantity means fortunes.

Daily are prospective purchasers leaving Toronto, Hamilton, Orangeville and other local points to see for themselves what is going on for this nearness to these great possibilities is a feature which distinguishes this Caledon field over other fields, thousands of miles away, rendering them practically inaccessible and necessitating implicit confidence in statements of vendors.

Within four or five weeks the drillers at No. 2 well state they should strike gas in large volume, when other wells will be immediately started and pipe lines laid to the nearer towns, only ten miles distant. Within fifteen miles radius of the Inglewood well is a population of possible gas users that will make the commercial end of the undertaking immensely remunerative and of course enhance the values of shares of the Dover Oil Company, very materially.

The nearness of these wells to even Toronto and Hamilton only 38 miles, is likewise an attractive comparison in distance, when it is considered that Tolbury, Ont. gas is at present delivered 160 miles.

The Caledon gas field and probably oil, with its enormous possibilities at present, is certainly very attractive and the man or woman with money to invest should at least investigate it, considering its nearness.—Adv.

Acton Hydro Assets $33,841.35

With Only $6,109.21 of Liabilities. A Greatly Reduced Rate

A report from the Hydro offices at Toronto during the week show the returns from the various municipalities served by the Hydro-Electric Commission. During 1921 the Hydro-Electric business of Brantford, Kitchener, Woodbridge, Acton and Georgetown was most successful. Official audited figures just made public show this.

In Acton, before the Hydro service began in 1912, the average kilowatt hour rate was 10 cents per kilowatt hour. The first Hydro rate was 6.9 cents for domestic lighting and 7.5 cents for commercial lighting. Successive rate reductions made by the Provincial Commission have saved consumers $14,894.30. The present average rate is 3.6 cents and 3.5 cents for domestic and commercial lighting in Acton.

On these rates the Acton system had revenue in 1921 of $13,062.32. After providing $916 for renewals reserve there was a net surplus of $1,361.42, equivalent to $6.68 per horse power on the energy purchased by the municipality during the year. The load has increased since 1913 from 54 horse power to 202.7 horse power. Despite a slightly higher generating cost at Niagara the rate for delivered power to Acton has been reduced from $36 to $32 per horse power. The total assets of the system are $33,841.35, the balance of liability is $6,109.21, and the reserves and surplus funds accumulated in nine years make $27,732.14.

The Hydro has certainly saved money for Acton, in addition to the greatly added conveniences.

Joe Veroni, Guelph, Murdered

This Well-known "Bootlegger" Found Dead at Niagara Falls, N. Y.

The body of Joseph Veroni, Guelph, was found with three bullet holes in it on the Lewiston Hill road, near Niagara Falls, N. Y., at 11.30 o'clock Friday night, by John McShadden, bus driver for the Gray Bus Line of that city.

The body was lying at the side of the road about half way down the hill, in a position that indicated that it had been hurled from a moving automobile, according to Coroner Dr. W. L. Draper, who is investigating the case.

Deputy Sheriff Henry Vroeman, of Lewiston, who was at the scene of the murder a few minutes after the finding of the body, has notified the sheriff's office and a net is spread out for the murderers.

It is believed that the assailants had a high powered automobile and that they drove fast and far immediately after the murder.

Veroni lived in Guelph for eleven years. After the Ontario Temperance Act came in force he was known as the boss bootlegger for the district. Some time ago he left for the border cities with a view of doing a larger business in liquor. He had been fined for liquor violations repeatedly and was out on parole from the Ontario Reformatory, having served part of a jail sentence.

Veroni ran a grocery store on Alice Street, was 42 years of age, and had a wife and family of nine children.
