Police Charge Man Following Car Crash

A two car accident recently at the curve by the Campbellville school has resulted in a Limehouse man being charged with failure to leave half the road free. William Service, 22, was charged by O.P.P. Constable G. Moore after an accident in which his car crashed into a car driven by Gilbert Hammond, R.R. 3, Guelph.

Patricia Ferrier, a passenger in the Service car, received the only injuries, a bump on the head.

POLICE VETERAN

MOOSE JAW, Sask. (CP)—Patrick Henry (Paddy) Doyle, 93, is believed the oldest surviving member of the old Royal Northwest Mounted Police. He joined the force at Toronto, in 1884 and saw Louis Riel hanged in Regina that year.

FIELD TRAINING COURSES are now being conducted at the Halton County Health Unit with students from many points attending. While some are in sanitation inspection courses, others are on public health assignments such as shown here. Gwen Mitchell, McMaster University, with public health nurse Betty Schaefer, are making a throat inspection of a Burlington public school pupil.

Waterworks superintendent J. Lambert reported briefly. Out of his report it was agreed to periodically turn on the auxiliary well at Warren Grove. New paint for the town's fire hydrants is also to be ordered.

Commissioners discussed the possibility of having the front of the hydro shop, damaged in a fire last year, re-stuccoed. Also considered was a form letter to accompany souvenir editions of Hydro News, to be sent all local consumers as part of the hydro golden jubilee celebrations.

Chronicles of Ginger Farm

Written Specially for the Acton Free Press by Gwendoline P. Clarke

All is quiet on the home front—at least for the moment. Dave is in bed but not asleep. He has had a very active day—and so has Grandma! Grandpa also shares in the activity as he has Dave outside with him for about a couple of hours every afternoon. We occasionally have a tussle of wills. Like all other children Dave has to see how far he can go and get away with it. For that reason we have to make sure that he does as he is told. He can travel so fast and has so much strength for a wee fellow that neither Partner nor I could handle him if we allowed him to get out of hand. Of course he has a lingo all his own which we don't always understand. However, by following his line of reasoning — and don't ever think he hasn't got one — we can generally figure out what he is talking about and in that way we make out all right.

Surprisingly, he gets into very little mischief. I expected we would have to put things out of reach and keep a few doors and cupboards shut up but it hasn't been that way at all. Nor does he interfere with the television. Of course he wants his own programs morning and evening. After that he pays no attention to the set at all. But a funny thing happened yesterday. Dave was by himself in the living-room. I thought I heard him whimpering and went to see what was the matter. He was sitting in a big chair and half crying as he looked into the black face of the television. I had forgotten to turn it on! That was soon remedied and he was happy again.

The weather hasn't helped us at all with our baby-sitting. We can't leave the young man outside to play by himself—there are too many wet places. Practically the only dry spot is in the lane—and that hardly makes a safe playground. The weather also complicates the business of getting him dressed—lightweight snowsuit, mitts, helmet and rubber boots—not quite the sort of outfit you expect a child to wear the fourth week in May.

And how disappointing the garden is this spring. Very few daffodils and we usually have such a lot. I hope the bulbs haven't rotted. One of our neighbors, who generally has the side of a hill looking just like "a host of golden daffodils", this year has very little bloom at all. However, in our garden we at least have lots of narcissi to look forward to. Apparently they don't mind the cold, backward spring. There is still no spring seeding done around here, except on a few isolated farms where a stretch of sandy soil runs through the district. On some farms cattle have been turned out to pasture. They should at least have plenty of grass and water for awhile.

Catkins are out on the poplars and the orioles have returned to the elms. Occasionally we see canaries and sap-suckers. And that is about the extent of nature's story at the moment. No frogs, even yet.

Government surveyors have done a little more decorating in our fields. They already had yellow stakes tipped with black, and orange stakes tipped with red, some of them to mark the spot where iron stakes are embedded in the ground. But just recently another work gang came along and put in ordinary steel fence posts right alongside the yellow stakes. The Department of Highways evidently doesn't intend anyone to forget where the survey goes through. It isn't so communicative in other matters.

For instance, the Department has already registered a plan for expropriation of the land needed for the road but as yet we have not been notified. Nor have there been any men out from the property office to appraise the value of the land. Strange the things that can be done on a person's own property when the government takes over. Not that we mind. We are only too anxious to see the work started. That's the trouble with these big highway jobs—the planning stage takes so long the road is out of date before it gets finished.

This column has been written by fits and starts in between attending to David's demands and answering the telephone. We did not expect any company this week-end and then came a call from my sister and nephew in Oshawa—would it be all right to come for the day on Monday? The answer was definitely yes. We have not seen them for over three years so we shall be very glad to have them come. Later I suddenly remembered one of them is a vegetarian and the other on a fat-free diet. That rather complicates things with the stores closed.

Fortunately we have plenty of milk, eggs, rhubarb and a little asparagus. All that added to whatever the refrigerator may produce will no doubt see us through. We also got a phone call from Daughter who said she was feeling very much better so we feel well repaid for having taken young Dave off her hands for awhile. It looks as if grandparents still count in the scheme of things. 'Bye for now—I hear the young man calling from the bathroom!
