Proposed New United Church

New United Church building was endorsed by the congregation Wednesday. An architect's sketch of the proposed new church, facing Mill St., is shown. The present building will house a Christian Education centre. Overcrowding and need for major repairs prompted the decision.

Endorse Plans for New Church Renovate Classroom Building

A unanimous directive to the Acton United Church building committee to finalize plans for a new church building and to begin repairs to the old church was given at the congregational meeting last evening (Wednesday).

Alf Long explained the committee felt the most suitable plan was not necessarily the most expensive. It was estimated the cost of the new church, repairs and renovations to create a Christian Education building of the present church would be $90,000. Some alterations would be postponed. Other proposals and problems were discussed before the proposed plan was endorsed by ballot.

Rev. Gordon Adams reported on the year of "rapid growth and far-reaching changes". Membership now stands at 413 with an increase of about 30 families during the year.

From 35 to 50 attend the 9 a.m. services, he said; about 100 attend junior church, which is "bursting at the seams"; about 200 attend the morning service while Sunday school enrolment is 280.

The serious problem of overcrowding has limited formation of groups and classes. Mr. Adams pointed out the "gigantic problems of building".

Ken Allen reported on parsonage repairs. Next planned for is a renovated kitchen.

The Adams family was sincerely thanked, on behalf of church members, by G. W. McKenzie.

Finances were discussed and the proposed budget accepted.

The present building committee of Mr. Long, chairman, Mansell Nellis, Orwell Johnston and Ken Allen was authorized to select additional members.

Elected elders were Amos Shoemaker, Robert Hart, Jack McGeachie, Don Van Fleet and Orwell Johnston; to the board of stewards, Ross Swackhamer, Gordon Beatty, John Stone, Bruce Shoemaker and Jack Gordon. Edgar Lidkea was named treasurer of the missionary and maintenance committee.

still a free enterprise party, not a party of free handouts", and noted that the people in need today are those who had no pension plan when they were working people.

In closing, the speaker promised to endeavor to uphold the party, but warned he wouldn't have "a whip cracked across my back."

Clifford Waite of Lowville introduced Mac Sprowl to the audience, noting that all three candidates were of Presbyterian faith. Mr. Waite, who is a United church lay minister, explained that his choice for candidate had made an impression on the young people, and had travelled to many parts of the world representing young people.

"The kind of fellow you can trust," he said, explaining the number of prominent positions the young Acton farmer has held and is presently holding. Mr. Sprowl was last year on the championship debating team, is an accomplished public speaker, a livestock judge and a hockey player in junior farmer circles.

For 11 years he has held positions in the juniors at club, county and provincial levels. This year he is a director on the Ontario Federation of Agriculture.

Mr. Sprowl explained in his message he was 29 years old and his ancestors had lived here in 1820. He stated he was prepared to begin work immediately and promised to work for the Progressive Conservative party, which he said works for the future progress of every man, woman and child in the county.

"Let me be your servant," he suggested in concluding.

While Burt Monoghan, appointed returning officer, and his assistants, Wes Beatty of Acton and Fred Tilley of Oakville, counted ballots, Wallace Nesbitt, M.P. for Oxford county, spoke to the gathering on the stand the P.C.s are taking in the government.

Since 1941, the proportion of Canadians living in urban localities has increased from 56.5 per cent to about two thirds, principally as a result of the tremendous growth of the manufacturing industry in the period.
