Local Francophile community to reach out to other Francophones

French Corner

Did you know that there are many Franco-phone families in Georgetown?

Okay, relatively speaking, we are not that many! I came from Quebec City 10 years ago and it seems I keep running into Franco-phones.

I bought my first house from a Franco-phone real estate agent by pure chance, then I met my (Anglophone) husband, and when he decided to join a softball league in town, half of his team was Francophone or married to one. Not long after the birth of our daughter, a new family moved across the street and soon after, we had new friends and two Franco-phone babysitters that we love!

In 2012, we relocated to Georgetown South to be slightly closer to the French School and Daycare on Miller Drive: l'École Sacré-Coeur. To my big surprise, we met four families on our street where one member is Francophone.

I presently sit with other parents on the parent/teacher Committee at Sacré-Coeur and we are interested in getting the Franco-ophile community together to organize activities for people eager to practise their French or speak their mother tongue. There are such groups in Mississauga and Toronto, but after a long day at work, I want activities close to home.

So here is the deal: Once a month, we will write about French topics, or let you know if we organize an activity in French. In return, we'd like your feedback. What are your interests as a Francophile? What would you like to know about our school? (By the way, for those interested to send your kids to Sacré-Coeur, there is a school open house on Wednesday, Jan. 28 at 18h). What activities would interest you in Halton Hills?

Please let us know at georgetownfrancais@gmail.com.

Ironically, I wrote this article entirely in English, but I promise you that next time you will need your French reading skills!
