THE GEORGETOWN HERALD

WEDNESDAY EV'G, MAY 19, 1915

THE ENGLISH GOVERNMENT has finally arrived at a more moderate decision for dealing with the drink problem, according to The Times, which places the proposed restrictions under the following heads:

"FIRST—Prohibition of the sale of intoxicating spirits.

"SECOND—Encouragement of the brewing of lighter beers.

"THIRD—Special public house districts to meet local needs.

"FOURTH—Reduced hours of sale generally.

"FIFTH—Compensation for the interests affected.

THERE IS SOMETHING impressive about looking over old records and there comes upon names and events that you have long since forgotten, or partly so. You come across some old acquaintance's name that you have long since lost track of, and you find time to wonder where he is now. And your mind becomes set too, that you once across the record of your marriage or some other important incident in your family or personal life, that serves to bring many recollections of the past and those associated with it. Alas, that our records are none too numerous, and often fall us altogether. The historian is sometimes scorned as "dry," but he has his important uses in the community.

DON'T IMAGINE FOR A MOMENT that advertising will not bring you results in your immediate field. That's an error that many merchants make, when they assure themselves that their store is so well known that it doesn't require newspaper advertising—that the trade will naturally drift their way, anyhow. There isn't a store anywhere in the world that has so secure a footing—not a single store—and you are not doing business in a field but that your sales can be increased by careful newspaper advertising. If this is not true, why is it that a stream of mail orders are constantly going out of your town to catalogue houses? And are not those sales made by these catalogue houses the result of persistent advertising in the very field you feel that you have cultivated to the limit? Whenever you get such an idea fixed in your mind, and really believe that there's nothing more to conquer, you are simply turning over ready money to the man that does possess the broader vision—you are ceding territory and rights to others that careful newspaper advertising would retain in your possession.

Fishing Regulations.

Regulations regarding fishing contained in the government's circular will be of special interest to local anglers. The orders prohibit the taking of bass from Lake Erie west of Point Pelee between May 25 and July 15, bass and maskinonge from any lake between April 15 and June 15, pickerel between April 15 and May 15, speckled trout, Sept. 15 and April 30, salmon trout and whitefish, Nov. 1 and Nov. 30.

No Cut in Employees' Wages Yet.

Some months ago the Grand Trunk Railway officials came to an agreement whereby after April 1st the salaries of employees would be reduced owing to hard times. So far no action has been taken in the matter, and as the men have received their usual sized envelope for April, it is apparent that the company does not intend to act at present. The company started this month to pay their employees in cash, instead of by the cheque system, owing to the necessity of putting a two cent war stamp on each cheque. It is estimated that the war stamp would cost the company $200,000 per year.

Has its Place.

The Toronto Telegram evidently believes that the local newspaper has an important place in the community. It says: "The Markham Economist, founded in 1866, has absorbed the Markham Sun, founded in 1877. One weekly journal will now flourish where two lived before. Markham village owes much to weeklies that have appeared for 38 and 50 years, respectively. The country weekly and the small town daily can establish the dignity and value of local life. The villages, towns and smaller cities of Ontario have not rewarded the work of their own newspapers. Ontario has failed to encourage the editors of local weeklies and dailies who fill a place that can never be filled by city newspapers."

No Reciprocity in Licenses

The Ontario Motor League, which organized the big deputation to waits upon the government and ask for reciprocity in automobile licenses with the United States, has received a reply from Hon. W. H. Hearst, containing the decision of the government not to make any such change this year at least. The last of many requests for reciprocity was made on March 23rd by a deputation gathered from all parts of the province. In the house Hon. W. J. Hanna had made it clear that the government was not ready to grant reciprocity at the present stage, but the deputation came up nevertheless. After hearing addresses from several spokesmen for the deputation, Hon. Mr. Hearst promised consideration, but his remarks did not raise among the gathering any special hope that the appeal would be granted.

Fake Bargains in Coal Oil.

An American Oil Company has had its agents in this section of Dufferin county during the past week, endeavoring to sell coal oil to the farmers at a greatly reduced price, as they claim, of 15½c a gallon, says the Orangeville Banner. As the local oil dealers are charging 18c a gallon for a higher grade of coal oil, taken at first glance it would seem as if this company is offering a real, up to date bargain. But the fact that they also endeavor to load each purchaser with a $6 galvanized tank, together with their oil, proves to be the fly in the ointment that offsets any reduction in price which they may be offering in their oil. The local dealers are prepared to sell any prospective purchaser this same make of tank for $5.50 and will fill it with high grade Royalite American coal oil for 15 cents a gallon. It will therefore be easily apparent that the boasted money-saving bargain is purely of a fictitious nature and our farmers will not only save money by patronizing the home dealers, but will help to keep the money in circulation where it will be of most benefit to themselves.

BUILT CRUCIFORM CHURCH.

Curious Story of Cross Shaped Edifice In Toronto.

Visitors to Toronto often wonder at the story behind the boards which close in the windows of the hoary old Primitive Methodist Church, corner of Yonge street and Davenport road. The structure is a landmark of old Yorkville; when opened in 1846 it was the village's finest show building. At the same corner stood the toll-gate that collected the nickels from the buggies and wagons jogging off towards Lambton and Weston, at this point, in those days.

The first minister to preach there was Rev. James Boyd, and in their turn several well-known divines served consecutive terms; Revs. Charles E. Stafford, Wm. Herridge, James Edgar, M. H. Mathews, C. O. Johnson, and T. W. Jelliff. There are very few of the worshipers at St. Paul's Methodist Church, Avenue Road, who know that a certain striking stained glass window filtering the light to their hymn-books once was an equally admired feature of the edifice on Davenport road. Dwarfs fill up its space, the largest opening on the Yonge street front. The Yorkville Primitive Methodist Church was only occupied twenty years and has now stood virtually idle for 25 years. It has even temporary shelter to different sects; the Salvation Army's drum beat there for an interval.

The neglected church, in its circle of chestnut trees, is a great puzzle to many people; its site was apparently so well chosen, and its present condition needs only a small expenditure to render it "serviceable." An old citizen, a Methodist himself, suggested the other day that perhaps people of his faith are superstitious. "I remember hearing once that the congregation abandoned it because it was built in the form of a cross. Walk around Toronto, or drive through the country, and you can always tell what denomination worships there by the style of architecture. The English Church and Roman Catholics are partial to the nave-and-transept plan, but whoever heard of a Methodist Church in that form except the one at Davenport road?" Enquiries elsewhere failed to connect up this old citizen's suggestion. It has been learned, however, that the original Primitive Episcopalians, who built the place, were an offshoot from a little church on Cumberland street, old Yorkville, under the care of Rev. Robert Cade, who was sent out by the London Foreign Mission, in 1853. Such was his success that an agitation for a larger place of worship began. The new site was chosen by Robert Walker, head of the well-known "Walker and Sons," of the Golden Lion on King street, where the King Edward stands. John Walker, one of the "and Sons," further promised a big subscription, and wanted the new church erected following the plan of one he had taken a great fancy to in England. His offer was most thankfully accepted; and the place was put up according to the stipulated cruciform shape.

Canadian Girl's Experience.

Miss Margaret Cross, the talented Canadian violinist, is a much-talked of personage just now, owing to her recent escape from the maelstrom of European military strife. For months after the war began she was the cause of anxiety and speculation among her many Canadian friends and admirers. However, after being detained a full half year in Austria, she managed her exit from that country, arriving in Genoa, Italy, whence she sailed to New York, reaching home a short time ago.

Margaret Cross is the daughter of Albert J. Cross, of Vanlook Hill, Ont., where she was born November 24, 1893. As a child she was precocious to a degree that was uncanny, starting the study of the violin at the age of 7. At school later she was so far in advance of her years that her parents sent her to remain some months with relatives that she might be held back a year, but Margaret had the ambition and determination that has since carried her through many difficulties. She kept up her studies and was home in time to pass the High School entrance examination at the head of her class.

Miss Cross attended the Canadian Conservatory of Music, Ottawa, from 1905 to 1911, studying the violin under Donald Heins. In June, 1911, she left for Austria, where she was under the tutorship of the celebrated Prof. Sevcik, who was a teacher of Kubelik, Marie Hall, Kocian and many other well known violinists. Under his direction she made such progress that a tour of southern Europe, including Sicily, was arranged to begin at the end of her studies last July. This concert tour had to be cancelled owing to the outbreak of war. Miss Cross has a great admiration for the people of Bohemia, whom she learned to love and respect during her student days there.

Canada's Industries Extended.

Gen. Hughes intimated a few days ago that orders for shells for the allies to the extent of $175,000,000 are now being executed in Canada. He gave the further most important information that arrangements at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., and Sydney, C.B., were so far forwarded that henceforth Canada would refine her own copper, purify her own zinc and manufacture her own brass for war munitions.

Prince Edward Helping.

Although Prince Edward Island is the smallest province in Canada the citizens of that part of the Dominion are doing a great work for their country in this war. Only the other day the Women's Patriotic League sent a donation of $100 for the Canadian Red Cross, and they are working hard in many other ways for the soldiers at the front.

A Stubborn Husband.

"My husband is one of the most stubborn men in the world."

"He can't be any more stubborn than mine."

"Oh, yes; I'm sure he must be! Yesterday I had an engagement to meet him at 8 o'clock."

"Yes?"

"Well, it was nearly 4:30 when I got there, and he won't admit yet that the reason he got white he was waiting didn't seem good."—Kansas City Star.

Made Them Go Pretty Far.

Rare.

"Have you any rare coins?" asked the old fogy.

"Yes," replied the grouch. "I have a five dollar gold piece in my pocket right now.—Cincinnati Enquirer.
